GLADYS THOMTE POOLE
His Wife, and Fellow Genealogist

1903--

1903--1975

Evidence points to the fact that Edwin must have begun Poole ancestry hunting in earnest as early as 1960 and continued with regularity until his death in 1975. After his decease, Gladys has continued his research, has organized and forwarded voluminous documentary material to the collaborators which has formed the basis for this genealogy. Individually and collectively, their research spans two decades.

Edwin contributed many articles to historical and genealogical societies, one of the most notable being, "Charbonis Squar", contributed in 1964 to the Pacific Northwesterner and reflecting his Dakota experiences with the American Indians. He also completed an outstanding documentary film on the Pilgrims which has circulated nationally and internationally. It reflects his research on our Huguenot ancestry, on which he contributed in depth research.

Posterity will be exceedingly grateful for this man's contributions.

INTRODUCTION AND ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This is a genealogy and family history of the direct lineage of the three collaborators involved, from John Pool, arriving in America in 1630, through 14 generations to the present time.

The three collaborators in this production have the same ancestry through the 7th generation at which point Betty continues with the Moses Poole lineage in her supplement to the other two lines. Harry and Edwin branch off at the completion of the 9th generation, Harry following the Estella Poole lineage to the present, Edwin following the Edwin Franklin Poole to its termination. Family history is recorded by sketching one person from each of the lines, listing some pertinent facts about the individual ancestor, or descendant, and giving descriptive material about the particular historical period in which each lived. There has been included in this compilation a number of other lines but no effort has been made to furnish family history on them, but merely to establish genealogical data in the form of family groups. A glance at the index charts following will reveal these other lines. Our direct lines have been asterisked in the family group sheets and a Roman numeral captioned to show our direct lineage.

Recognition of all the contributors to this publication would require a volume in itself. Many living and many deceased members of the family have returned detailed charts of their immediate families to the collaborators. An attempt has been made to recognize this in the family group chart in the space designated, "Information obtained from." A thank you is extended to all these relatives. We are grateful, as posterity will be.

Much credit must be given to Sister Loretta Penchi, Genoa, Wisconsin, for our success, who, as a member of the Wisconsin State Genealogical Society, diligently compared pedigrees which had been submitted by local genealogical societies to the State Society and found both Betty Lois Schnick and Harry Meredith Hutchison both interested in Daniel Poole. She took time out of her busy days to telephone Harry and inform him of this fact. As a result, Betty and Harry became acquainted and found they were third cousins. Betty is living at Delavan, Wisconsin, works for the Delavan Enterprise, the local newspaper and volunteered to collaborate in a Poole publication. Thank you Sister!

We are greatly indebted to Betty and her associates at the Delavan Enterprise for their contribution of the photographic illustrations in this book. It would have been considerably more expensive from another source.

We are also especially appreciative of the assistance given by Ms. Nancy Mullen, Librarian, Historical Room, Ventress Memorial Library, Marshfield, Massachusetts, for her contribution of knowledge on our great-grandmother, Hannah Ames Poole. We had been searching for a long time for a book which we felt sure had been published by an Azel Ames in the late 1800's. We had copies of a letter he had directed to our great-grandfather Edwin asking for a subscription to a voluminous work authenticating us to the Mayflower and beyond. We learned later through a follow up on Ms. Mullen's information that Azel had been injunctioned from publishing the material. However, she informed us of a work by Faber Ames which took the Ames back to 1530 and past the Civil War period. She not only did that, she sent a copy of a chapter from Faber's book which documented our line back to the Mayflower. (Unsung heroine) Thank you very much, Nancy!

Gladys would like to thank the following, in respective order, for their contributions over the years: Stella Blose, Gladys Brown, Mildred Stiles, Mary Crawford, Cecil Ihlenfeldt, Fay Wittke, Marcia Dalin, Mildred Beckman, Gladys Hedlund, Rhoda Lemanski and Viola Calvin.

Betty expresses her appreciation for all those who have contributed to the knowledge of her descendants and ancestors and will detail this in her supplement.

Finally, we would like to extend a sincere thank you, and our appreciation to Ms. Valarie Chambers of the Everton Publishers, Inc., P. O. Box 368, Logan, Utah, 84321, for granting us permission to use their family group forms in compiling our genealogical information and for offering to advertise our publication in the Genealogical Helper.

ORIGIN OF THE NAME POOLE

The use of surnames such as Poole had their origin during the time when Roman civilization was at its height. After the fall of Rome, there followed several barbarian invasions of Europe which destroyed much of the previous culture and lasted from the middle of the 3rd century through the middle of the fifth century, or what we term the "dark ages". During this period, European people were known only by their first names such as Richard, James, Charles, or other given names.(1)

It was following this period that we found a record of the first Poole, (about 1050) who was known as Bleddyn, the son of Cynfyn. Bleddyn united all the separate factions of the Welsh people and made Wales a kingdom. He became the first King of Wales. His son, Cadwyn ap Bleddyn, built Powy's castle, which still stands in Wales. This became the family castle and was known by the English in the vicinity as "Welshpool" because of the pool, or small lake, that existed on the grounds. It is still known by this title. Previous to the adoption of hereditary surnames, families living near such a place for several generations probably would be identified locally by a personal name followed by "atte poole". (French for, at the pool.) (2)

Medieval Britain was largely undeveloped with many rivers, lakes and pools. The man was lord of his castle and he was largely independent of his neighbors. When cultural, social and economic conditions became more complex, such as it did following the Norman invasion of England in the year 1066, this simple identification became confusing. More trading took place and people traveled greater distances. Growth of population and commercial centers created a situation where there might be many persons with the same first name but of different families. It was during the seventh generation of Pooles living in the "Welshpool Castle", (about 1200) that a man named Griffith was found to be lord of this castle. He became known as Griffith de la Pole, (Griffith at the Pool) and the name Poole originated. It was first spelled Pole (French for pool) or de la Pole. One family dropped the de la and it became Pole. Another spelling became Pool, which would be Anglicizing Pole. A third spelling (Poole) reverts back to the French spelling of pool, or poole. ("atte poole") Quite recently, a prominent Poole in England has used the spelling Poel, which gives us a fourth variation of the spelling. Somewhere Poual was also noticed but many of the early settlers did not know how to spell their name, only pronounce it, as they were illiterate. Therefore, variations of the spelling came about by differences in the recorders of vital data.

Some branches of this family name may have derived the name from persons living in the town of Poole, in Dorsetshire, England. Since mobility was comparatively limited in medieval times, strangers were objects of curiosity and an individual, or family, moving from Poole to a new location would be known to their new neighbors as: "of Poole".

Genealogists today use four general classifications for name origin:

1. Place names: Hill, Marsh
2. Relationship: Johnson, Erickson (John's son) (Erick's son)
3. Occupation: Smith, Baker
4. Nicknames: Armstrong, Swift

Place names, like the name Pool, form the largest of these four general classifications.

Because of the evolutionary nature of name development, it is virtually impossible to pinpoint the exact date of the formation of any new name. Poole, of course, is no exception. However, some of the ancient records of the English nation, including the famous Close Rolls, give evidence of early forms of the name and show usage as early as around 1250. The names listed below are excerpts from these records:

Walter atte Pulle--Close Rolls, around 1250

Walter de la Pulle--County Oxfordshire--Hundred Rolls, 1273

Boniface atte Pould--County Somersetshire--Kirby's Quest, 1327--1377

Yohahna de Pulle--Yorkshire Poll Tax, 1379

Stephen atte Poule--County Somersetshire--Kirby's Quest 1327--1377

The surname Poole is most abundant in the English counties of Somersetshire, Dorsetshire, Essex, Shropshire, Staffordshire and Wiltshire. By the time of the first census in America in 1790, many Poole families had settled in this country. The average Poole household had 5.5 members and census records indicate that there were more Poole head-of-households living in Massachusetts and North Carolina than any other part of America. Official United States records, compiled in 1974, indicated that in that year Poole was the 526th most frequently occuring surname in the nation. There were approximately 53,300 adult Americans named Poole at that date. (1)

EARLY ENGLISH BACKGROUND OF THE POOLES

Our origin from abroad is believed to have been in one or both of two outstanding Pole families of English history.

One of these families known in English history as the de la Poles were earls of Suffolk from 1385 to 1504 and dukes of Suffolk from 1448 to 1493. They had acquired a claim to the throne of England in the late 15th century through the marriage of John de la Pole, 2nd Duke of Suffolk, with Elizabeth, sister of the future kings Edward IV and Richard III. (brothers) This claim proved fatal to the line, various of John's sons suffering execution, or exile. The last of John's sons suffering persecution, William, died a prisoner in the Tower of London in 1539. It is from this line that we claim direct descent and which will be discussed more fully when we feature the first Pool in America in the form of another John Pool.

Another family of the name of Pole, perhaps distantly related to the house of Suffolk, also owed its advancement and ultimate fall to its proximity to the throne. Sir Richard Pole (died in 1505) married Margaret, a niece of Kings Edward IV and Richard III, and so their progeny was feared by the Tudor dynasty under Henry VII, who ascended the throne in 1485. Margaret and her children, among who was Cardinal Reginald Pole, were all executed, or exiled by Henry VIII. The two grandchildren died in the Tower of London under Elizabeth I. (1) & (2)

Griffith, the seventh generation of Pooles referred to in the origin of the name, discussed above, died in 1260. His son Owen surrendered his title, Prince of South Wales, and his land, to Edward I, King of England in 1289 and received back his lands as a barony. (3)

Owen's nephew, William de la Pole, Jr., was the first Mayor of Hull, Yorkshire, represented the city in Parliament and was appointed a baron of the Exchequer. He died in 1366. His father, William de la Pole, Sr., had been a merchant in Hull until the time of his death in 1329. His two sons, Sir Richard and Sir William, acquired considerable wealth in trade. Sir Richard was appointed the butler of Edward III in 1327 and died in London in 1345.

Michael de la Pole, born about 1330, the eldest son of Sir William, had served under the Black Prince at the siege of Limoges in 1370 and was made Chancellor of England in 1383. This was during the reigns of Edward III (1327--1377) and Richard II (1377--1388). It should be understood at this point that the "Hundred Years War" (about 1337 to 1453) between England and France took place under these kings, who had laid claim to the kingdom of France. Their fortunes, to a great extent, were dependent upon their military victories and upon their relationship with the existing king and parliament. Richard II created Michael 1st Earl of Suffolk in 1385 but the following year impeached him. Although Richard II reinstated him in 1387, he was soon compelled to go into exile, dying in Paris two years later.

Things were not going well in France for the English and the 2nd Earl of Suffolk was killed in the battle of Harfleur in 1415.

The 3rd Earl of Suffolk was killed in the famous battle of Agincourt in 1415.

The 4th Earl of Suffolk was William de la Pole (1396 to 1450), brother of the third; he had served 14 years in wars against the French and, from 1431, exercised considerable political influence in England. He brought about the marriage of Henry VI and Margaret Anjou and from 1445 he was virtually prime minister of England. He was created 1st Duke of Suffolk in 1448 but fell into disfavor when most of Normandy was lost to France. The king banished William to Flanders for 5 years but while William was being escorted across the English Channel, enemies caught up with them, removed William to their ship and returned to Dover where they beheaded him on board the ship and threw his body into the channel. His body came on shore at Dover and was buried in the Collegiate Church at Wingfield, which was founded by Pole. (3)

John de la Pole (1442 to 1491), 2nd Duke of Suffolk, son of the first duke, married Elizabeth, sister of Edward IV and Richard III and in 1461 was steward of England at the coronation of the former king. Successively, he supported Richard III and Henry VII, despite the fact that three of his five recorded sons were pretenders to the throne after Richards' death. The eldest son was John de la Pole, born about 1464, had been created Earl of Lincoln and was involved in the plot of Lambert Simnel to overthrow the existing king but was killed at the Battle of Stoke in 1487.

Edmund de la Pole, born about 1472, was also Earl of Suffolk, having relinquished the title of Duke. He was beheaded by Henry VIII in 1513 after years of plotting to gain the throne.

The fifth son of the 2nd Duke of Suffolk and third pretender to the throne, was Richard de la Pole. He sought assistance on the continent and was recognized as heir to the throne by the King of France. He was killed at the Battle of Pavia in Italy while fighting for the King of France in the year 1521. Some historians say that all of the sons of the 2nd Duke of Suffolk and their offspring were destroyed but others dispute this story as discussed further in considering the history of our first John Pool in America. (2) and (3)

To understand clearly the origin of the claims of these families, it is necessary to have some knowledge of the so-called "War of the Roses" between two rival families, each claiming priority to the throne. The one family was termed the House of York and used a white rose to signify this group. The other was termed the House of Lancaster and they used a red rose to signify their group. When the "Hundred Years War" ended and England was driven from France, we find these two families struggling for supremacy and the throne of England for over 30 years. (About 1455 to 1485.) The Pooles were from the House of York. They were supporters of Edward IV and Richard III and laid claim to the throne through the relationship previously noted. When Henry VII decisively defeated the York group in 1485 and established himself as King of England, he married Elizabeth, daughter of the Yorkist, Edward IV, thus combining the two families. Henry Tudor had considered himself heir to the Lancaster claim to the throne and had been living in exile during Richard III's ascendency. Through plotting and betrayal on the part of those whom Richard III considered loyal subjects, rebellion arose under the auspices of Henry. Richard was killed while leading his loyal subjects against Henry at the Battle of Bosworth in 1485. This victory combined with the marriage noted firmly entrenched the House of Lancaster and permanently destroyed any claims of the House of York.

FOREWORD

A brief foreword is felt necessary to explain the organization of this material for easier comprehension by the reader.

The Roman numerals used in the family group charts indicate the generation being considered. The capital letters used in the family group charts refer to the siblings, or brothers and sisters, in the charts when considering them for the next generation, and finally, the Arabic, or regular numbers, identify the individual offspring of a particular group. Consider the following examples: The first family group chart shows the progenitor, or fulcrum point, from which you can go both ways, backward, or forward. This is John Pool and we identify him with the Roman numeral I to mean the first generation. His family group consists of 3 children, Jonathan (1), Sarah (2) and Mary (3). We do not need any capital letters in describing John's family group. When we consider the third generation, however, (or III) we have three family groups, or the children of Jonathan, the children of Sarah, and the children of Mary. Each is given a capital letter to differentiate it from the others in that generation. We find Jonathan's family being designated as III A and numbers 1--10 to identify his children. The next one of the second generation having children is III B, or Sarah, with numbers 1and 2 to designate her offspring. Third is Mary, who has 8 children, will need a III C designation and numbers 1--8 to designate her offspring. There is no need to bring forward any data on a sibling who has no children, as there will be no next generation from that individual.

This process is followed throughout the fourteen generations considered in this publication. Only those have been given an A, B, C, etc. on which we have information. We have tried to allot, or assign, these letters to the next generation in the order of their seniority, in order that it will be easier to follow the sequence. If one of the children of a certain generation is not considered in the next but has had children, it is because we have not found, or could not encompass that information within the limits of this effort.

APPALACHIAN MOUNTAINS

The great mountain system of the eastern United States extending from northeastern Alabama into the State of New York and according to the best recent opinion, embracing also the New England system. Thus defined, it includes a number of ranges and mountain groups of which the more important are the Alleghenies, the Blue Ridge, the Cumberland, the Black Mountains, the Catskills, the White Mountains and the Green Mountain range extending northward to the Laurentian formations.

JOHN POOL (POOLE)

CA1610--1667

John Poole, the first of our direct line of ancestry in America, arrived in Boston, Massachusetts in 1630. It is probable he was one of the company that came with Governor Winthrop from England at that time. (1) He had money and servants and was one of the eight who first settled "ye new towne",-Newton, now Cambridge. According to traditional family history brought to Maine by Samuel Hale Pool, it is believed that the John Pool, who came to Boston from Reading, England in 1630, was descended from one of the Earl of Lincoln's brothers. John Pool, Earl of Lincoln, was the eldest of five recorded sons of John de la Pole, 2nd Duke of Suffolk, and heir to the throne of England by way of the York family. He and his brothers were all executed by the Lancasters according to authenticated history. However, some historians say there were more sons of the 2nd Duke of Suffolk. King and Berg in their "The Poole Genealogy" state there was a sixth son who was knighted on June 17, 1497. His name was William and he married Katherine, sister of the 5th Lord Stourton. This is recorded in "Peerage of England", by Collins, page 635 and also recorded in "History of the Noble House of Stourton". Some historians say there was still a seventh son but King and Berg report they they have not been able to verify any as of the date of their publication. (1973.) Tradition, according to these authors, has it there was still another brother (John's sixth) whose name had not been recorded for obvious reasons as noted above. How long that tradition has been handed down is not known but indications seem fairly strong it was brought to America by John Pool in 1630. (2)

According to Charles H. Pooles' account, "a considerable number who had previously landed at Salem, proceeded to a place on the Charles River, at the present site of Cambridge and established there a permanent settlement. He resided there or at Billerica, a few miles north of Cambridge, until his removal at some time previous to 1635 to Lynn, which then, with its outlying territory, embraced the towns of Reading, Wakefield, Lynnfield and parts of Saugus, Woburn and Chelsea." (1) Vital Records show Jonathon, John's first born, was at Billerica on December 24, 1634. The next two of Johns' offspring were at Lynn, Massachusetts, in 1636 and 1638 indicating his presence there at those dates. Eaton in his Genealogical History of Reading (p. 106) places John at Cambridge in 1632. (5)

John left Cambridge in 1634 and settled in Lynn village, then called Lynnfield. (3) Here he constructed the first saw-mill in that area. Frank R. Holmes in his Ancestral Heads of New England Families attributes John Pool to be the Proprietor of Lynn in 1638 and the founder of Reading in 1639. (4)

By 1639, John and other inhabitants of Lynn, were petitioning the Colony Court for a place to found an inland plantation. This petition was granted for a strip of land 4 miles square at the bounds of Lynn but with a requirement that progress toward a village be made within 2 years, or they would forfeit the land. It was called Lynn Village and the Court ruled it would be exempt from taxes of Lynn as soon as it established seven families in seven houses. This was done by 1644 and the town given the name of "Redding". (Reading.) By 1645 they had established a First Congregational Church, the 12th in the Massachusetts Bay Colony. (5) p.6

The earliest records of the new community of Reading (1644) show John Pool contracting with the town for the privilege of a water mill to grind the colonists corn into grist. This grist-mill remained in the Poole family for 4 generations. It took resources to bring the river out of its natural course and maintain the mill, as well as to repair it, at his own expense as stipulated in his agreement with the town Court. In turn, the Court agreed there would be no competitive mill "so long as the Pooles, his heirs, or assigns, shall well and sufficiently grind for the towns' use." (5) Eaton has this to say about John in his Genealogical History of Reading: "came here from Lynn; was at Cambridge in 1632; was one of the earliest settlers of Reading; and probably the wealthiest. He built the first grist-mill and fulling mill of the town. (See description for fulling mill at the end of this chapter.) He also owned much land at the north of the Great Pond including the late Newcomb Mill, where said Poole erected the first saw-mill and included also the present farm of heirs of Benjamin Cox of Lynnfield." He also has a note on page 109 of this genealogy saying, "The Poole family, for several of the early generations, were leather dressers and eminent for wealth, talents and influence."

That John Pool was a man of some wealth is first evidenced by the fact he was the highest taxpayer in Lynn of those that petitioned to settle Reading. (Eight in number.) (Probably also considered affluent for those times.) It is again evidenced in the division of land in the new settlement. In 1647, the town ordered there should be a division of land and meadow, "according to parsons and cattell; for evari parson tow akers, and to evari best one aker; and he, whose estate will not amount to tenne akers, shall have tenne akers; and no man to exede twenti akers; and so for medow, he whose estate will not amountto fife akers, shall have fife akers; and so evari man according to parsons and estate,--two akers for a parson, and one for a beast." (5) An adjustment was made in 1652 to conform with this and John got 20 acres of land, along with only 5 others, while most of the 33 males, constituting the first complete registar of Reading population, received only 10 acres or little more.

Still further evidence of this wealth is noted in 1658 when more land north of the Ipswich River was divided according to lot. John received 206 acres of land in this division, which was the largest portion with the exception of three others. One of these received 399 acres which was the highest acreage granted. There were about 30 families involved and one received as small an acreage as eleven, with at least a dozen less than 100 acres.

In 1666, there appears in the town records of Reading, a "minister rate" for the previous year whereby there was a division of the "Great Swamp". This "minister rate" was probably similar to our tax rate of today and based on the value of the individuals' property. It should be said at this point that in the early settlements in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, the land was held in common, or used without distinction among the settlers. This was soon changed and ownership on some proprietorshipbasiswas established with a Common in the center of the settlement for common use, either of timber, or for grazing of livestock. This meant that as new property was granted by the General Council there had to be a division on some basis. John had only three persons with a higher "minister rating", or the amount of taxes paid in the previous year based on the personal wealth of the individual. It is easy to see that John would become a large landowner.

The following was taken from the History of Wakefield, compiled by William E. Eaton and his History Committee in May 1944and published in May 1944 just prior to their Tercentenary celebration. (Item Press p. 19)

"There was John Poole, the miller, glover and farmer, who was thought to be one of the wealthiest in the settlement. He was granted land on Water Street for "a mill to grind the Settlers' Corne". He was in Cambridge in 1632 and in Lynn in 1636. In 1650 he built a saw mill on Vernon Street at the Lynnfield town line. With Lieutenant Governor Dudley in 1632, he was among the first eight proprietors of Cambridge. Though prominent in all ways in the settlement, it was strange that he never held office, nor was he a member of the Reading church."

Consultation with the minister, and also the historian of the church, on a visit to the church in 1981 confirmed John had never been a member of the church, nor was he buried in the Congregational Church cemetery.

Mary Crawford copied an account taken from an article she had read in the New England Historical and Genealogical Society records which read as follows: "Though he emigrated from England with a large body of the sect of Puritans, he seemed not to have been identified with them, in their peculiar theological views, and consequence was not honored by them with any political preferment, though his influence must have been great among his townsmen owing to his wealth and social position. Whether a portion of the residents of his neighborhood were inimical to him through religious differences, cannot now be known, but it is certain he was once upon their complaint made to pay a fine for chastising a servant (Mass. Historical Records.), and that afterward, possibly in retaliation he entered an action for trespass against sundry parties for attempting to deprive him of his firearms (Essex Co. Court Records). That he was careful, shrewd and able in the management of his business affairs cannot be disputed, from the fact of his leaving so large an estate for the period, as his will attests.

His friendship for the Rev. John Brock, the minister of the Parish, is shown by the gift in his will, and Mr. Dane of Andover, a prominent man of his day, was also a friend to whom he leaves a remembrance in the form of a small bequest." (6)

Although John was not listed with the 41 names recorded of the men and women who organized the first Congregational Church of Reading on November 5, 1644, it is believed his sister Judith Pool was. A Judith Pool was one of those listed and as John seemed to be the founder of Reading, it is reasonable to assume his sister may have been a part of his household. (7)

One further consideration should be noted before leaving this family history of John. This pertains to the probability that he came to America with John Winthrop in 1630. John Winthrop, I have discovered, was a Suffolk landholder belonging to the country gentry, and according to the 1930 publication by Jernegan which will be related in the following paragraphs, he would have had an income at that time, in terms of 1930 values, of from $15,000 to $20,000 a year. This must have been a huge sum for that period. He was a man of high principles, with some training in the law, and would probably have reached a high position if he had stayed in England. Among the assistants with him were large landholders, wealthy men. Theophilus Eaton was an eminent London merchant. Simon Bradstreet was a Suffolk gentleman of fine estate and had studied at Emanuel College, Cambridge, where so many Puritan leaders were educated. (1) If our tradition of John's descent is true, this would seem to have been a natural association for John among the Suffolk personages.

Jernegan goes on to describe Winthrop's Expedition of 1630. "Winthrop and about 840 emigrants, with 240 cows and 60 horses, embarked on eleven ships and sailed in three detachments from Plymouth, Yarmouth, and Southampton. They arrived off the coast of Massachusetts in May, June, and July, 1630. This was the greatest effort yet made in English colonization. In spite of the fact that the expedition was well equipped, there was scarcity of food, not corn enough to last two weeks after landing, and the settlers were compelled to eat acorns, mussels, and clams to eke out their scanty supplies. To escape the expense of maintenance, 180 servants, most of whom had been brought over during the two years before, were freed. Two hundred of the faint-hearted emigrants returned to England. Sickness spread rapidly, and by December about two hundred had died. Some lived through the winter in tents, their only shelter from the rigorous blasts of a New England winter. The necessity of cultivating as rich a soil as possible led to a dispersion of the settlers from Salem, and this was the occasion for the founding of settlements at Charlestown, where a few persons already resided, Boston, and Newtowne (Cambridge). Within a year there were eight separate settlements, the beginnings of future towns." (1)

John Poole was listed as an inhabitant of Newtowne in 1632. (2) Charles Poole further states that the "Town Book of Newtowne" found by the "Braintrey Company" on their arrival in 1632 lists John Pool, with Deputy Governor Dudley, Secretary Bradstreet, and five others as being the first inhabitants, or the proprietors of the new town. (Newtowne, now Cambridge.)

FULLING MILL

Fulling is the art of cleansing, scouring and pressing woven woolen goods, etc., to render them stronger, firmer and closer. Also called milling because these cloths are usually scoured by a water mill. The principal parts of a fulling mill are the wheel, with its trundle, which gives motion to the tree, or spindle, whose teeth communicate that motion to the pestles, or stampers, which fall into troughs, wherein the cloth is put, with fullers earth, to be scoured and thickened by this process of beating it. Results in considerable shrinkage in length and width, obviates the tendency to unravel and renders the threads of the cloth so firm and close as to be almost imperceptible.

Encyclopedia Americana, 1951

THE PROPRIETORSHIP (1)

The royal grant on terms reminiscent of feudal England was sometimes made to a single proprietor or a group of proprietors. In the proprietorships, political control was in the hands of the recipients of the royal grant, but such power was normally delegated in part to representatives of the colonists.

CORPORATE COLONIES (1)

The fact that Massachusetts Bay Company emigrated to America, taking its charter along, converted the venture into a corporate colony. Connecticut (1662) and Rhode Island (1633), originally settled by Massachusetts malcontents, received royal charters which conferred upon the resident colonists control of political and financial affairs.

SUMMARY

The Massachusetts Bay Company was a corporate body of men who had received permission by means of a charter from the King of England to a tract of land in New England where they could settle, control the settlers, and carry on trade with the mother country. This was relatively a small group and they elected a Governor, in our case, Governor Winthrop who assigned activities to this small group to supervise and exercise political control. Such a man was John Pool. He had invested money in this corporate enterprise and was controlling a group for his and the corporations profit. He had extensive farm lands, a grist-mill, a saw-mill and a fulling mill. He was also characterized as a glover, which would seem to indicate the manufacture of gloves, or leather operations. He pioneered in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, first by changing the logs into lumber as the forests were being cleared away in the new land, then utilizing the land he had been granted by carrying on farming operations with his family and also preparing feed for the livestock by grinding the corn into grist. Fourth, the fulling mill must have been a very active operation as the pioneers used their spinning wheels to prepare wool for cloth that must have been soft in nature and had to be run through John's fulling mill. It should be noted, too, that John was always moving forward into virgin territory, or forests primeval, from Cambridge to Lynn, to Reading, or Wakefield and then to North Reading. The following pages will show the importance played by this man and his descendants as they migrated into Connecticut and then westward in Massachusetts, on to Wisconsin, Minnesota and the western states of Washington and California.

JONATHON POOL (POOLE) (POULL)

Jonathon succeeded his father on the homestead and also owned, with his son John, much land at the north of the Great Pond. (Lake Quanapowitt) John had died in 1667 and the provision of his will named Jonathon "Heire and Executor". Provision No. 9 stated, "I give to my grandchild, John Pool, one fift part of the saw Mill farm when he comes to the age of sixteen years, or Eighteen, which my son Jonathon shale please". It was customary under English law to provide for the grandson as well as the son. In this case Jonathon was the only son and John the only grandson at the time of the elder John's death. So it must have been a natural for Jonathon to follow in the footsteps of his father, who had been one of the first and most outstanding settlers of the town of Reading. Jonathon, then, became the second generation of Pools to keep the grist-mill grinding. (1) p. 11

Eaton in History of Reading notes the following entry in town of Reading history for 1668. "This year the town made the following agreement with Jonathan Poole, who lived on the site of Wakefield's rattan factory: 'The town of Reading doth give to the aforesaid Jonathan Poole and to his heirs and assigns, free liberty of the river, that now the Corn Mill stands upon, without molestation from any other, so long as the said Jonathan Poole, his heirs and assigns, shall keep the said Mill in good and sufficient case to grind the town' corn only (except there be sufficient water to grind out of town's men's corn), amd to maintain the same from time to time, at his own cost and charge. And to keep the Millhouse in such repair as may secure men's corn and meal, and to clear the river to the Mill from time to time, at his own cost and charge. This sufficiency of grinding, we mean so much as the water will grind, with the best husbandry as may be used.'". (2) p. 21 This confirms that the agreement of John Pool with the town regarding mill rights was still in effect and confirmed by Jonathan with some additional rights to fit current conditions.

When John died, Jonathan was 33 years old and had established an outstanding reputation in his own right. Eaton describes Jonathan as a smart, capable man. (2) p. 25 He was a Selectman, a Justice of the Peace and a Representative for his community. His gravestone, near the lake front in the Congregational churchyard at Wakefield, is quite a curiosity, having all of his titles, a sword, a mace and a lot of Masonic emblems on it. He is supposed to have been one of the earliest Freemasons in the Western World. (3) p. 2

In 1645, the same year that Reading established its First Congregational Church, the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony ordered every town to keep a military guard against surprise attack by Indians. A military company had already been established in Reading at this time, probably when the town was incorporated in 1644, and Richard Walker made its first Captain. It was known as the Reading Infantry Company. It was further ordered that "youth from ten to sixteen years old shall be trained by an officer of each company on muster day in the use of small guns, half pikes, and also of bows and arrows, lest the Colony should be destitute of powder". (2) pp. 274, 5 One can almost experience Jonathan's joy (he was 11 years old in 1645) in joining the muster and making believe what he would do if Indians attacked. It must have been like youngsters today playing cowboys and Indians, but real not just imaginary. We find, as this order would seem to imply, increasing difficulty with and hostility on the part of the Indian population on the eastern seaboard. It was learned through an English Indian interpreter that the Indians were plotting among the various tribes to completely exterminate the English from New England.

King Philip (self-acquired title) was an Indian Chief, second son of Massasoit, who had been chief sachem of tribes between the Charles River and Narragansett Bay. The Narragansett tribe of Indians were one of the larger and most powerful groups of Indians in that area and King Philip became the chief instigator of the plot to eliminate all the English. In January of 1675 he caused the colonial interpreter who had informed on him to be put to death. The colonists in turn put to death those of the Indians responsible. This inspired a number of attacks and massacres by the Indians throughout the towns in Massachusetts and Connecticut. The war (Indian) known as King Philip's War had begun.

It was necessary to call up the Militia and in October of 1675, the Governor of the Colony marched against the Indians with 1000 men. By this time, our 7th great-grandfather, Jonathan, has become a Captain of the Reading Infantry Company to replace Richard Walker, who had removed to Lynn. He was 41 years old by the time of the war's outbreak and must have been well seasoned in Indian warfare after beginning training at ten years of age. He was made President of a Council of War in the winter of 1675-76 and was much valued in the war. (4) p. 4 To understand the problems of this war, one needs to visualize the nature of the population at this early period. Most of the towns probably had only about 60 families. Consider Reading in 1678. A petition to the "Honoured General Courte" in 1678 by Reading stated: "very few above 60 families." (2) p.26 In 1675 Reading was one of 49 towns in the colony assessed by the Colony and of the 49, twenty eight had more families and 20 had less, so most of them probably had less than 100 families. As they were spread out considerably, one can see they would be quite vulnerable to attack by an Indian group of any size. Several massacres took place and in the town of Hadley, Captain Beers and his garrison of 20 men were all killed, or tortured to death. It is here that Captain Jonathan played an important part in saving the area from complete annihilation. Attacks of a similar nature took place in more than a dozen locations in the colony. Where each town would have a Militia group of only about 20 men, one can see also that when the Governor gathered 1000 men, he had a strong force for those times. King Philip's war terminated in August of 1676 when King Philip was killed at the Battle of Bristol. (5) p.290

Jonathan had command of the Three County Army raised by Middlesex, Essex and Plymouth counties. The flag carried by this army was made expressly for this purpose and was called the "Three County Flag." This was the first American Flag, out of which the present United States flag came. The same flag was carried by the Minute Men at Lexington one hundred years later. (4) p.4 He served as a Captain for Major Appleton at Hadley, a center for the main Indian uprising and a major battle of the war.

He died suddenly shortly following the end of the war (1678) at 44 years of age. He had been considered for Major just the year before his death and it must have been a great disappointment to him to lose this appointment. Captain Swayne who received the appointment was also a son of one of the first settlers but was not a freeman, or voter, in the settlement. It was a time when more democracy was bursting forth among the settlers and Captain Swayne was popular with the younger and more numerous group of settlers. The age, wealth and official dignity of the town were for the older candidate (43 years old) while Young America went for the younger competitor. (33 years old) (2) p. 25 He continued on as Captain in the Militia, however and as Selectman, in which position he had served since 1670 until his death, being elected annually. Eaton describes Jonathan as follows: "According to historical records, he was a brave and skilful warrior, as well as being eminent in Civil life."(2) p. 274

In October of 1981, my wife and I visited the grave of Jonathan in the Congregational Church Cemetery at Wakefield, Massachusetts. It is probably over 100 years since Gilbert Brown (8th generation descendant of John Pool) visited the grave of Jonathan and provided the description given above. Since then his grave,along with numerous others who were buried on the spot where the Congregational Church now stands, was moved to the western end of the cemetery where they form a semi-circle in that position. I saw the Masonic emblems and could identify the inscription but it was anything but imposing. The site is beautiful but time has left its mark on the tombstone and it is almost at a point where the inscriptions are illegible. The Church office maintains his record, however, and he holds an honored position in their records. There are several other Pool graves in the Congregational Churchyard but they did not obtain burial there if they had not been conscientous members. John, you will remember was not buried there.

That Jonathan was eminent in public life during that period is noted over and over again in the town records which are on file in that community. The record of the Town Meeting of Reading on December 5, 1670 has this to say about our Jonathan. "At a Town Meeting held upon the 5th of December 1670-- There was chosen for Selectmen for the ordering the prudential affairs of the Town for the year ensuing, William Cowdrey, Robert Burnap Sen., Jonathan Poole, Thomas Kendall, Jonas Eaton-- The power that the town doth give unto these five men here chosen, is to order all the prudential affairs of the Town except giving away land and Timber--" (6) p. 58 As pointed out above Jonathan held this office each year from 1670 until his death. As the Town Meeting Hall and the Church were practically identical during this period it follows naturally that Jonathan was also very prominent in the affairs of the Church.

(See definitions of Selectman and General Court following. Jonathan as noted above also represented the Town in the General Court as a Representative.) (Also see Correction on Jonathan p. 5 following definitions.)

GENERAL COURT

The name of the legislative assembly of Massachusetts and New Hampshire during Colonial times, and subsequently applied to their state legislatures. The old English name of the meeting of a body of managers, or members of any corporation is "court", as court of aldermen, or court of directors. So the meeting of corporators of the old Massachusetts Company was called a court., then the primary assembly of freemen under its charter was called the General Court., and the name was retained after it became a representative body. (Encyclopedia American, 1951, pp. 371-373.)

SELECTMEN

A name given in the New England States to the chief officers of a town or village. English parishes had their vestries which were of two sorts, common vestries, composed of all the rate-payers and select vestries. In the latter, concerns were managed by select vestrymen. Hence the term selectmen, as used in New England, for the governing board of the town..... The selectmen acted under the orders of the Town meeting. (Encyclopedia Americana, 1951, p. 538.)

NOTE:
The General Court under Governor Winthrop from 1630 to 1634 developed into an Oligarchy in which seven or eight men held office on the basis of good behavior with the power to govern more than 1000 settlers. The settlers, however, had their Town meeting which in the case of Massachusetts Bay was the Church and consisted of Puritans from England. As they grew in population, this early domination by freemen of a very limited number spread to more freemen and we find eventually (probably 50 years later) the semblance of democratic government arising.

CORRECTION
Lilley Eaton in his History of the Town of Reading (p.281) shows Jonathan serving as Selectman for Reading from 1662--'64, '68-'74, '76 and '77. He also shows on p.289 that Jonathan served as Reading Representative in 1677. This meant he served on theGeneral Court noted above.

JOHN POOL III

What we have learned from written records of our 6th great-grandfather, John, of the 3rd generation in America, seems to follow pretty closely the pattern established by his grandfather and father. He, like his father Jonathan and his grandfather John, was a supporter of the Congregational Church, active in military affairs and, because of his wealth, must have wielded considerable influence in the community.

It must have been a great joy to Jonathan when, after having four daughters, he was blessed with a son. It seems only natural that he should name this son John after his father who had done so much for him. Even more overjoyed, perhaps, was John's grandfather after this length of time without a Pool to carry on the tradition. At any rate, John bequeathed this grandson one-half his estate at the north end of the Great Pond (Lake Quanapowitt) which consisted of 2 farms, a residence and a saw mill, making him a quite affluent Pool at an early age. What happened to the other sons which followed John, we are not sure but they certainly left an impact on their community which was not forgotten.

When Jonathan died suddenly in 1678, at the premature age of forty four, he probably had not provided for any disposition of his wealth at that early age. John was only thirteen, Jonathan eleven, Samuel ten and Thomas five. Another daughter had been born just a few days before Jonathan's death, so Judith, his wife, must have really had problems.

That the family made the most of their resources is evidenced by the fact that John became a Lieutenant, Jonathan a Captain, Samuel a Lieutenant and Thomas a Captain in the military service. The oldest of the three surviving daughters who were older than John married a Captain Bancroft, also one of the leading families of Reading, before John's demise and the other two married within 4 years thereafter.

Militarily, as previously discussed, it was necessary for every man, woman and child to be continually on the alert and prepared to combat with hostile Indian tribes. Although the Reading settlers had a good record in their relationships with the Indians in their area, we have learned that Captain Jonathan and other members of the militia were subject to call by the General Court when needed in other parts of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and had been prominent in terminating King Philip's War in 1675. This was not the end of trouble with the Indians, however, as the conflict continued spasmodically from 1765 until the end of the French and Indian War against England and the colonies in 1763, or around 100 years of warfare. John, as a Lieutenant must have been called upon frequently during his lifetime to provide men and supplies to participate in these conflicts. We find the Council, in 1690, calling for a company of soldiers from Reading to join in the Canada Expedition in connection with the Indian War. The next oldest son of Jonathan, Jonathan, Esq. served as a sub-altern Captain along with Nathaniel Goodwin and Captain Ephraim. (1) p.36 No doubt Captain Jonathan's brothers would have been part of this company, although Thomas would have been only 14 years of age. John probably remained at home to carry on the farming and milling operations with the aid of his daughters and younger son. It must be remembered the Pools operated two mills, the saw mill and the grist mill as well as the farming and leather operations. Supplies as well as soldiers were essential in this warfare.

An interesting account of Lynn and Reading and its peaceful activity with the Indians was recorded by William Eaton and his History Committee in May of 1944, when Wakefield celebrated its 200th anniversary of incorporation. It read as follows:

"Here were swamps, mighty trees, "such as are unknown in England," wild animals, enormous flocks of wild pigeons, the wild turkeys, "exceeding fat, sweet and in abundance, fish in the rivers and ponds, grapes, blackberries, blueberries in great quantities--and also the Indians, generally friendly and from whom the Reading and Lynn settlers bought their land at a cost of Sixteen Pounds "of current sterling money of silver." Readings share was Ten Pounds, contributed by ninety-six of the early settlers. The Indians named in the old deed of 1686, now safe in the Salem Court House archives, were David Kunkshamooshaw, and Abigail, his wife, Cecily, alias Su-George: James Quonopohit, his wife, Mary, all nearest of kin and legal successors of George-No-Nose, alias Wenepoweekin, the earlier Chief of the Saugus Indians. It is interesting to note here that the first edition of the Bible ever printed in America (1663) was in the Indian language and was called "Um-Biblium God."" (2) p. 21

We discussed John's grandfathers' inactivity in community and church affairs when recording our 8th great-grandfather's family history. We began to feel, that in spite of Jonathan's outstanding record of church and public service, that his son John was following in his grandfathers' footsteps. This we found not to be true wonder whether writers were justified in their comments is doubtful in the light of John III's record. It is believed that John I, the same as John III,remained in the church at Lynn and had rendered effective service there as a community and church worker. We noted the following paragraph in a capsule history of the First Parish Congregational Church of Wakefield, Massachusetts, published by William E. and Virginia M. Jones, Co-Chairpersons of the 325th Anniversary Committee of that church in 1969. (3) p. 4.

"From 1658 to 1679, there was agitation over the need for a new meeting house. In 1688, a subscription from 108 subscribers, 72 from Reading, 26 from "Linn End" (Lynnfield), and 10 from Charlestown (now Stoneham), amounted to 207 pounds, 1 shilling. The probable cost of this second meeting house was between $400 and $600."

Turning from this reference to Lilley Eaton's history of the Town of Reading, we find the detailed list of 108 subscribers. (1) pp. 34 and 35. There among the list of subscribers from Lynnfield, or "Linn End", we find our great-grandfather's name listed. He was the 6th highest contributor of the 108 total. Later on in history, p. 138, Lilley Eaton publishes the following:

"A catalogue of the brethern and sisters in full communion in the first church in Reading hereunder followeth: January 3, 1720-21."
Among those listed were Thomas Poole and Rebecca, his wife and Jonathan Poole and Bridget, his wife--two brothers of John. Samuel and William, the other two brothers were deceased by this time but we find two other Poole families listed. Going further on this list we find a sub-heading entitled, "Members of the Church belonging to Lynn End (Lynnfield) not yet dismissed." (1) p.140
Under this category was listed Lieutenant John Poole and Mary, his wife.
We might conclude as early records of Reading were missing that John I had also remained in Lynn and that is why he is not found in the records of the First Parish Congregational Church in Wakefield.

It is interesting and pertinent to read further in the Jones Committee report of 1969, as follows: (3) p.4

"From the settlement of the Town to about 1713, the public provision for the erection and maintenance of a meeting house and the support of preaching the gospel was made at meetings of ALL the voters of the Town."
As, up until 1691 in Massachusetts Bay Colony, you had to be a church member in order to vote it can be seen how strong the church influence was on community decisions. As people were taxed in accordance with their wealth, the Pools must have made a major contribution to the community's growth. The Massachusetts charter of 1691 removed the Congregational church test for the right to vote. (4) p. 14 The Jones Committee report quoted above went on further to say: "In 1713, probably recognizing the injustice of requiring those who had no interest in religious instruction, to share in its expense, the people of the church adopted the English practice of having all Ecclesiastical affairs managed separately from Civil Affairs by a body called 'That Parish', a practice in vogue in England for more than a thousand years." (3) p. 5

In conclusion, it should be said that John III's life must have been much smoother than his fathers, even though the Indian problem was still there. Some of the colonial assemblies offered bounties for Indian scalps. The Connecticut assembly, for example, in 1704, enacted that "this court will allow out of the publick treasurie the sume of five pounds for every mans scalp of the enemy killed in this Colonie." And Massachusetts offered bounties for scalps graduated according as scalps offered were those of men, women or youths. The Reverend Solomon Stoddard of Northampton, Massachusetts, 1703, urged the use of dogs "to hunt Indians as they do Bears." The excuse for this was that the Indians acted "like wolves and are to be dealt with as wolves." One woman took part in this pastime: Hannah Dustin of Haverhill, Mass., received a bounty of fifty pounds for ten Indian scalps, won in her famous rescue of herself and her children. The ferocious attitude of some white men towards the Indians added to the difficulties of maintaining friendly relations between the races.(5) p.332 The Reading problems on this score were minimal. John's first born was a male and our 5th great-grandfather. He was the third of our direct ancestors to be named John and will be the fourth one which we will write about in our family history. Only three other children made up his family, a far cry from his father's ten. John's brothers must have been a big help to him as they were able to carry on church and community affairs while John supervised the business operations of the family. John maintained the Pool influence in Lynn while his brothers made themselves felt in the newer area of Reading. Reading records for 1722 found his brother, Jonathan Pool, Esq. a deacon in the Reading Congregational church. (1) p.140 Prior to that Jonathan had also served as Selectman in 1701, '08, '14 and '15. This was an elective office for one year and required making all Town decisions in cooperation with four other elected individuals. Thomas Poole, his brother, also had served in this capacity in 1717, '22, '20 and '24. (1) p.282 The record certainly shows the Pooles were men of influence during this period but there must also have been considerable sibling rivalry considering the favoritism shown John by his grand-father.

John is buried at Saugus which would be closer to his community than the First Parish Congregational church burying ground in Wakefield, Massachusetts. Jonathan Pool, Sr. and Jonathan, Esq. (Jr.)as well as Jonathan, Esq.'s two sons Benjamin and Samuel will be found in the burying ground surrounding the First Parish Congregational church in Wakefield as evidenced by the weathered monuments pictured in this chapter.

JOHN POOL IV

Our fifth great-grandfather of the fourth generation of Pools in America was the third of these four to be given the name of John and we would be graced with a fourth direct ancestor of this name before moving to another given name of Thomas. John of the fourth generation was in the midst of many changes, socially, economically, politically and militarily. He was to be the last of the Pools to control the milling operations of the area and evidently did not hold the interest in farming that his forefathers had. Records indicate that this John had developed a trade as a carpenter. The need for more and better education was becoming necessary as there had been only private schools before John's birth and they were beginning to receive criticism as being very inadequate for social change. Vocationally there were more occupations arising as the settlements expanded and people felt the need for more than just basic food, clothing and shelter.

John was only 22 years of age in 1710 and but recently married when a Reading Company was called to move into Nova Scotia and Canada to assist in quelling Indian raids of the New England settlements. This must have necessitated taking him away from his home for protracted periods. At this time there were organized expeditions formed against the French and Indians in which several regiments from the Massachusetts Bay Colony participated. Among those listed from Reading in this and other expeditions were Lieutenant Benjamin Poole, Samuel and John Poole. (1) p. 132. The conflict with the French and Indians continued through the French and Indian War. (1754--1763.) During this time, the French were constantly inciting the Indians against the colonists.

When examining the third generation of Pools, we indicated that Reading had grown considerably and that well developed farms had come into existence. As the farmers prospered, they wanted more comfortable dwellings and found a need for new out buildings to accomodate tools and farm animals which they had been able to get along without in the earlier period. It was only natural that the more affluent citizens would want to get in on any new enterprise and it would seem that John saw a new opportunity in carpentry. John IV, then, was the first Pool to move from milling and farming into the new occupation of carpentry, or contracting for building. There was need, not only on the farms but in the community centers to construct new buildings such as the "meeting house" discussed in John III's activities. Improvements on old buildings, or additions, required more skill than had formerly been exercised in these construction projects.

There was no public education of a formal nature in the Massachusetts Bay Colony until 1693 when a law was passed by the General Court requiring the establishment of free schools. Again we find the Pools taking an active part in setting up the first school. Lilley Eaton records the following from early town of Reading meeting minutes.

"The schoole was to be opened on the 27th of December, and soe to continue two month certain; and said Poole is to have and be alowed for his pains 2 Pounds per month, money, and soe proportionable for longer time, if sd. Poole doth attend that sarvice or longer time than two month; to be payd before or upon some time in November next after ye date hereof.

" Furthermore, it was agreed with said Jonathan Poole, that hee should fiend firewood for the use of said schoole at 6/s, per month, for two or three months of the time the schoole held; but if said Poole found it hard soe to done, yn hee was to have some some consideration alowed him on this account." (1) p. 41.

Jonathan Poole was an uncle of John Pool IV from whom we claim direct lineage,, and a brother of John Pool III, or our 6th great-granduncle as referred to in recording John III's family history. Eaton also published a list of the Schoolmasters who were the early teachers in the public schools before 1800. Captain Jonathan Poole is shown on this list as having such a position from 1697 until 1701 when followed by Captain John Herbert. (1) p. 248.

We note further from Eaton's early history of Reading that there probably was no public school for the first 50 years of the settlement existence, beginning in 1639, except, "they trained up their little ones in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and so far as possible, around their own firesides, and in each neighborhood, taught them the rudiments of the simple knowledge they had learned from their fathers." (1) p. 242. The first reference to a school which we found upon the Reading historical records was in 1680 when it was said that a complaint was made to the County Court for deficiency of a Grammar School. So there had been private schools of a poor character.

John IV died in 1758 at a time when the colonies were in the midst of the French and Indian War. (1754--1763.) These last years were evidenced by continued conflict with the Indians and the French as cited above. Such an environment of pioneering in religion, social science and economic activity was bound to develop a group of people who would not long endure the domineering attitude of an English king, or Parliament. The Pools continued to be leaders in these military activities for the next generation also and became a part of the famous body of Minute Men who first faced their mother country in battle at Lexington and Concord at the outbreak of the Revolutionary War. With the training and experience they had in fighting Indians, they were bound to be a valuable asset to their country in the forthcoming battle for their independence from England.

That John IV was a hardy pioneer who had adjusted well to the many problems of these early settlers is attested to by the fact he lived longer than any of our first three direct ancestors, to the ripe old age for those days of 70 years. The next of our direct ancestors to live longer was Daniel, who was born in 1781 and lived to be 78 years of age. John IV also was blessed with 8 children, the first five boys and the next three girls. We will discover military service in the Revolutionary War by both his sons and grandsons. John IV's first born was also our direct ancestor and named John in honor of his father, or the 4th John in our direct ancestry and of whom we shall deal in our 5th generation in our next chapter.

MARY PARKER POOLE WILLINGTON, CONN. JOHN POOLE V

JOHN POOL V

Our fourth great-grandfather, John V, was the fifth generation of our direct Poole ancestry in America. He was the first son of John IV and the and the fourth of our direct ancestry to be called John. It, evidently, had become the custom to name the first born after the father and this John was no exception. He was to name his first son John but his fourth son Thomas was to become our third great-grandfather, or the sixth generation in America. We have not found any written anecdotes about this John but vital statistics tell us he must have settled on one of the fertile farms in the Connecticut River valley and had a family of 11 children. They are all registered as being born in Willington, Connecticut. The census of 1790 tells us that at that time the population of Connecticut was 97% rural, so we cannot assume John was anything other than a pioneer farmer as the rest of the population were. There were a number of reasons why John may have gone to Connecticut, leaving an environment where the Pools were well established and influential in their community.

First, the families in Reading were large, as they were in most of these pioneer settlements. He was the first born in his family but there were four more brothers following him and three sisters. Farm land was probably pretty well divided between the residents in the 4 square mile Reading area as well as the additional North Reading grant. The milling operations were passing into other than Pool monopoly so it was probably becoming necessary to seek greener pastures. As John had become a carpenter by trade as well as being familiar with farming, he felt there would be many opportunities in the Colony of Connecticut, which was newer than Massachusetts Bay and filled with lakes and streams which could furnish water power for mills to saw lumber and grind feed for the cattle.

John V may have been having some doubts regarding the religious philosophy entertained by the residents of Reading, who were devout Puritans for the most part and had persecuted many for their religious beliefs, even though they had come to America to avoid that persecution in England. Many religious dissenters had moved from Massachusetts Bay Colony to Connecticut and Rhode Island where they had more religious freedom.

Connecticut had one of the most liberal, or democratic charters, ever granted by an English king. The colony was virtually independent except in name. Her colonists were free to choose their own governor, magistrates and representatives. They could enact their own laws. In fact, the provisions of the document were so liberal that only a few changes were necessary during and after the Revolution, and a new Constitution was not adopted until 1818. (1) p. 530. How much different this was (since 1662) than the Massachusetts Bay colony. There an Oligharcy existed for at least 50 years after the founding of Reading and many of the political figures probably still controlled politics as they had been before even after 1693 when more liberal voting laws were passed. This was because it was a corporate colony, rather than a Crown.

As mentioned in sketching John IV, times were changing and carpentry was beginning to assume importance and John V was a carpenter. In the rapidly growing Connecticut, he could ply this trade as well as farming to supplement his income. Then, coming from four generations of ancestors who had braved the wilds and fought the Indians as well as the wild animals, he was of hardy stock and enterprising.

At any rate, we find John getting married to Mary Parker on April 19, 1733 at 20 years of age, probably at Lynnfield, Massachusetts. Almost a year thereafter on March 26, 1734, his first child was born in Willington, Connecticut. Here John settled and here John died in 1773 after having reared a family of 11 children.

We found that one of John's brothers, Jonathan Pool, Sr. was a soldier in the Revolutionary War with England. (2) p. 67. Those of his family who fought in this war are considered in our sixth generation sketch of our direct ancestors.

THOMAS POOLE

OUR THIRD GREAT-GRANDFATHER

Our third great-grandfather, or sixth generation Poole, in America, lived in an exciting period, and doubtless, a very difficult one. He was the fourth son of a family of seven boys and four girls. What success his father, John, had as a carpenter in Connecticut is not known but to provide for a family of eleven children would certainly require a strong cooperative effort and a heavy drain on ones economic resources.

The French and Indian War with England and the colonies had begun when Thomas was thirteen years of age and continued for nine years during which time he and his three older brothers must have served frequently in the local militia. You will remember that everyone in those early settlements began military training by compulsion when they were ten years old and continued until they were sixteen. The Historical Society of Connecticut in its listing of persons serving in the French and Indian War shows a Thomas Poole serving in Captain Pierces' Company of the 1st Regiment from April 15, 1755 to December 9, 1755. According to vital records he would have been 14 years old on April 14th of that year. (1) The second, and oldest living son at this time, was Jonathan. Jonathan served with Captain Phelps 7th Company of the 3rd Regiment from September 4, 1755 until November 11, 1755 near Schenectady, New York. (2) In the record of this Regiment, it also states that seven of the above rode horses from Willington in answer to "the alarem for ye Relief of fort William Henry."(This was a fort established in 1755 at the head of Lake George in New York.) The Historical Record also lists Timothy Pool, who entered entered Captain Fay's 10th Company of the 3rd Regiment on April 10, 1758 and was discharged November 11, 1758. (3) It lists Timothy again with Major and Captain Slapp of the 1st Regiment being mustered October 13, 1759 to support Fort Ticonderoga. Four regiments fighting. (4) This brother also fought later in the American Revolution and a picture of his monument in the Willington Cemetery is pictured with this chapter.

During and following this war, the colonists must have been taxed heavily to pay for the maintenance of troops in the field and the administration of the war. The ensuing twelve years prior to the outbreak of the American Revolution in 1775 must have involved hard work on the part of all the colonists to pay their taxes and provide for their families. Especially when they never knew when they would be called to serve with their local militia and how long they would be away from their farms which needed so much effort. They began to protest "taxation without representation" with a fury.

We do not know a lot about Thomas personally, other than the statistics gathered on the family chart coded VI A, but after reviewing the information available, we come to the conclusion that Thomas was the "old reliable" of the family. One by one, the other boys began to leave the homestead, marry, and establish homes of their own. John, at twenty one years of age, was the first to marry in 1755, and leave the nest. He was followed by Timothy in 1763, Jonathan in 1764, and Daniel in 1767. This left only two males besides Thomas to face the responsibilities of the home, and they were still very young, one eighteen and the other eleven years of age. The youngest girl was only four years of age and the father was in his fifties, probably engaged in his occupation of carpentry. So it would seem reasonable that Thomas had to be his fathers' right arm.

It should be noted further that Thomas did not marry until after the death of both his father and mother. John in March, and Mary in April of 1773, only a few days apart. Thomas was 32 years old at this time and on November 2nd of that year married Hannah Ames, and, do doubt, continued on as head of the household. The youngest sister, Elizabeth, was only 14 years old at this time and Samuel eighteen, so Thomas still had to be the "old reliable". Samuel did not marry until 1781 and Elizabeth in 1783. As Thomas and Hannah were both over 30 years of age when they were married, it is not surprising they had only two children in an era when large families were the accepted custom.

When the Revolutionary War began, Thomas was thirty-five years of age, and considering the above, he could hardly have been expected to enlist in the army for any protracted period. He probably was like many of the farmers of that time, a "Minute Man", who was in and out of the army in order to carry on his farming operations and also serve to the best of his ability. There was another factor, also; Thomas has an arrival, Thomas, Jr. in 1774, making another dependent for the "old reliable". There were many services to the country in addition to the actual fighting. Supplies were needed by the army, sometimes, if fighting was in the area, colonial troops needed feeding.

Horses also were expendable. We have been unable to find a Revolutionary War military record for Thomas but his brother Timothy was in the 2nd Connecticut Regiment where he served for 8 months under Captain Hinckley's Company. It will be noted that the dates inscribed on his monument previously mentioned, coincide with those given in the family group statistics provided with this chapter. The Historical Society of Connecticut, in its publication listing Connecticut men in the Revolution, list three other Pooles besides Timothy from Connecticut--John David and Chester. (5) Timothy, then, our 3rd great-granduncle, rendered extensive service to his country in both the French and Indian War and the Revolution from the colony of Connecticut.

It is felt appropriate, at this point, to refer to other members of Thomas's and our Poole family who had an outstanding part in the American Revolution. While it is difficult to obtain records of ancestors engaged in this conflict, we have established the identity of Timothy and also of a 4th great-granduncle Jonathan, son of John Pool and Sarah Eaton. Jonathan was married to Mary Leaman and was listed by The American Genealogical Research Institute in their Poole Family History as being a private in a Massachusetts unit. (6) p. 67 Eaton also refers to this same Jonathan when he refers to a list of companies of militia in the town of Reading, belonging to the Regiment commanded by Col. David Green of Reading, as they stood April 19, 1775, the day of the Battle of Lexington and Concord and included two Pooles, Thomas Poole, Drummer and Jonathan Poole. In the cemetery at Reading, where Minute Men heroes of the conflict were buried lies Jonathan Poole, who died at 79 years of age in September of 1799. (6) p. 705 This concurs with the data which we include in our Family Group V A 5. On this list Jonathan is referred to as Lieutenant, whereas on a list on p. 699 he was without title. The first list covered actual rolls of three companies of militia, one from each of three Parish companies and Jonathan was from the 3rd Parish. The second list shown as Appendix HH was a list of reminiscences of the Revolution, so, during the course of the War, or after he must have risen from private to Lieutenant.

Eaton also states that at the outbreak of the battle of Lexington and Concord, many of the citizens of Reading were there. It appears that the town of Reading sent to the army, for longer or shorter terms, from first to last, more than 400 men; and there was constantly in the field from Reading an average of one hundred men during the war. (7) p. 176. A list of the soldiers of the Revolution from Reading shows four Pooles, Eleazer Flagg Poole, Samuel Poole, Daniel Poole and James Poole. Another list from North Reading shows a John F. Poole, 33rd Regiment. (7) p. 650

More historical information has been obtained pertaining to Thomas's wife, Hannah Ames, our third great-grandmother, than about Thomas. Hannah was a direct descendant of Thomas Cooke, one of the passengers on the famous ship, The Mayflower, which landed at Plymouth Rock in 1620. (See Hannah Ames Supplement attached to Family Group VI A.)

It has been stated by Stella Blose, tenth generation descendant of John I, and daughter of Edwinnie Poole, that Hannah's parents disowned her for marrying Thomas Poole, due to his poverty. This would seem to confirm the story we have just related of the difficult struggle of Thomas on his father's homestead. Evidently, when all of Thomas's sisters and brothers had left home, he migrated to Palmer, Massachusetts, a growing manufacturing community where economic conditions were probably more satisfactory. There, Thomas, Jr., his son, was married about 1799 and vital records show Thomas Jr.'s first child was born in April of 1800. Thomas, Sr. died April 11, 1807 at Palmer, Massachusetts. (8) Hannah Ames, his wife, must have resided in Palmer, either in her own home, but more likely with Thomas, her son, until Daniel married in 1803 and settled on a farm in Belchertown, Massachusetts. Vital records of Belchertown show she died there in December of 1814, evidently living with or near her son Daniel, who had married Polly Vince and settled there. It would seem the fortunes of our direct Poole ancestors had seen a tragic decline from the wealthy and influential days of Reading.

DANIEL POOLE

Daniel Poole, our second great-grandfather, and last of the direct ancestors to remain on the Atlantic seaboard to the east of the great Appalachian chain of mountains, married Polly Vince on November 23, 1803, at Belchertown, Massachusetts. His marriage certificate indicated residence at Palmer, Massachusetts where his brother Thomas had married and resided since about 1799 and where, presumably, the parents had migrated from Willington, Connecticut. His occupation is recorded as farmer and it appears he had migrated from Palmer to Belchertown where he established a home for his new bride. Vital records show ten children being born to this couple, the last in 1828, and all at Belchertown, Massachusetts. (See Family Group VIII B in Chapter VIII.)

The farm must have been productive, or Daniel may have inherited wealth, as he assisted both of his sons, Edwin and Moses in procuring 80 acre farms for themselves in the new territory of Wisconsin to which they migrated. A copy of his will attached indicates provision for all his children remaining alive at that date. Only one of his children remained in Massachusetts to carry on the Pool tradition east of the Appalachians, which was Daniel Addison Poole and a brother of our first great-grandfather. Daniel, Jr., or Daniel Addison, was the one to be with his parents in Belchertown until their deaths, his mother in 1850 and his father in 1858, four years before his own death. Three of Daniels children had died before the date of his will in 1856, leaving seven to be considered. William, his oldest son, had spent considerable time on the farm before emigrating to Wisconsin, so he and Daniel received the remaining real personal property upon his death. The greater part of his estate had already been bequeathed. A letter from Daniel Addison to his brother Edwin Vince Poole dated April 13, 1862, just 4 years following his father's death and little more than 6 months before his death reveals something of the ruggedness of farm life at that date. (See Daniel Addison letter at end of this sketch.) (Also Will attached.)

Daniels death in 1858 marked the 228th year which our ancestors of direct lineage had remained on the narrow strip of land on the Atlantic seaboard east of the Appalachian chain of mountains. Seven generations had settled, pioneered and migrated from Reading into Connecticut and then north again into Massachusetts following the Connecticut river valley and farming on the new rich soil of that area. They fought the rigors of the climate, the wild animals, the Indians and the British until they could live in an independent and peaceful environment and now they were ready to move further into the wilderness and have the same experiences. Daniel's offspring, including our great-grandfather Edwin Vince searched for new land and new opportunities which were opening up in what soon was to become the state of Wisconsin. We will follow these new pioneers westward by sketching some of their activities, at least one in each generation, as they move into the 20th century and find new frontiers to face and new types of pioneering in a scientific and nuclear environment.

We would be amiss, at this point, not to mention Polly Vince, wife of Daniel and attach a brief history of her father Moses, who had suffered greatly at the hands of the British and fought valiantly for his freedom. (See Ch. VII Supplement to Polly and Moses Vince following Family Group VII A 2.)

WAR OF 1812

It was during Daniel's generation that we experienced continuing conflict with England, even after completion of the Revolution. It was not until Britains defeat in the War of 1812 that the colonists were able to resume their regular pattern of living without interference from the mother country. Something of the part which the Pooles played in this war is evidenced by the following excerpts taken from an account by Lilley Eaton on this struggle of the colonists. He is recounting the activities of the old Reading Company of which Jonathan Pool was the second Captain.

"The old training days of the company were grand occasions, especially during the war of 1812-15, when the old fire of the Revolution seemed to be rekindled. To be sure they did not have a big tent, in which to invite their select friends to take a genteel repast, but they had "Hale's Tavern" (a noted inn in those days, but now no more); .....And did they not all imbibe the martial spirit of those occasions, and become filled with courage and patriotism?

"Neither had they, in those times, a German band and French horns to animate their troops, or excite the admiration of the multitude; but they did have Majors Caleb Green and William Gould on the fife, and Majors Jeremiah Green and Samuel Poole and Aaron (late Dea.) Bryant on the small drum ....."p.275 It would seem the Pooles were still active at the old stand, even though the family had now become widely dispersed.

SUPPLEMENT TO MOSES VINCE AND ANN TUCKER

Moses Vince, father of Polly Vince, was also one of our early ancestors who resided at Wrentham, Massachusetts prior to the American Revolution and who later served in that war with and on the side of the colonies. He grew up in the vicinity of London where he was occupied as a product gardener. While relaxing in one of the local "Pubs", or taverns, he was recruited by one of the existing "Press Gangs" as a sailor on the ship, "Spitfire". The Press Gangs these days made a practice of recruiting sailors from taverns after they had imbibed a little too freely in the strong ale of those days, or helped them along with "knock-out drops" in their drinks. When the victims sobered up they found themselves aboard ship and subject to the ships' Captain, much like slave-master relationship.

Moses was not very happy when he found himself in the bunk of the "Spitfire" but he had no choice except to serve for the length of the voyage to Boston for which the ship was bound loaded with emigrants as were many of the same type in this period. The story has come down through the family that when Moses arrived in Boston and the ship was anchored to be refitted for return to England, he hit one of the guards on the head, jumped into the harbor waters and swam ashore. We find him next in Wrentham, Massachusetts, where vital records of 1777 show his intent to marry Ann Tucker which was consummated April 7, 1777. The fact that one child was born before Moses's record of marriage is understandable if you consider the circumstances. He probably was being searched for by the British to get him back aboard ship, or it may have been some distance from his abode to the official place of record. At any rate Moses and Anne had five children, William, Elizabeth, Moses, Jr., Eleanor and the youngest and our direct ancestor Polly, who married Daniel Poole.

The record of Moses's service in the American Revolution is rather scanty but archives show he served with Captain John Boyd's Company in Colonel John Daggetts' Regiment from August 24, 1778 until Sept. 3, 1778 when he was discharged at Rhode Island. (See p.____for archives record) It was the practice in that war for citizens to move in and out of service while caring for their farms and families--so much service was probably never recorded. The term "minute men" for the first fighters, or the "embattled farmers" expresses the actual practice. Stories elsewhere in this publication indicate the Pooles activities during this early period of such a nature. Moses was, no doubt, like many others, in and out of battle as the war moved from one vicinity to another.

MOSES VINCE (2) FAMILY GROUP VII A 2

The respect for Moses Vince is evidenced by the first Edwin Poole adding Vince as a middle name. His son Willie was named Willie Vince and Willie's grand-son, Daryl Hutchison, also had a middle name Vince indicating a veneration for this man over four generations. Moses's son, Moses Jr., became a Mormon and records of him and his brothers and sisters are available in the Mormon records in Salt Lake City, Utah. Moses Vince, Jr.'s son, Moses Andrews Vince was also a Mormon and is footnoted in the account of Polly Vince also attached.

FRANKLIN POOLE, ESQ.

OUR SECOND COUSIN

Franklin Poole was born October 19, 1808 in what was then the South Parish of Reading and now is known as Wakefield, Massachusetts. He maintained his residence at the home of his birth and was still residing there 86 years later, at the time of the 250th anniversary of the founding of the Town of Reading. (1894) He had married Rebecca Rollins in 1840 and lost her when she was 81 years of age, the year before the Reading 250th anniversary, after 53 years of life together. They were never blessed with children.

Franklin was the son of Timothy Poole and Jerusha Richardson. He and our second great-grandfather, Daniel, would be 2nd cousins. This would create a relationship between us of 2nd cousin, four times removed. His father had been a house painter and Franklin learned this trade from him but he also had a keen relish for the beautiful in his art. He began, not only to paint houses, but pictures of houses, of scenes real and scenes imaginary. The Wakefield Historical Society made him an honorary member and is especially indebted to his artistic skill and generosity in the many valuable portraits of private and public buildings which adorn their quarters. (1) One of his most famous portraits is that of the Wakefield Common on a normal day, picturing the people moving about and the buildings surrounding the village Common. A facsimile of this portrait was used as an illustration in the elementary school textbooks throughout the country for many years. We viewed a copy of it in the historical home of Bill Jones and his wife (local historians) on our visit to Wakefield and it is much treasurd by them and displayed in a prominent part of their home.

Franklin was educated in the Wakefield public schools and at the South Reading Academy. He was very fond of books and at an early age could converse with men of much larger experience and advantages on ancient and modern history. He became an editor and publisher in the community. Two of his most important publications were the Executive Organ and Phonographic Pioneer, a publication on the use of phonetics. At one time (1840) he delivered several lectures on the subject of phrenology, one of the pseudo-sciences of that day. He served the town on the School Board Committee, was a trustee of the public library and in 1847 resprsented the Town of Reading in the State Legislature.

He was a strong advocate of a small third political party known as the Abolition Party. The two main parties of this time (1830's) were the Whig and the Democratic Party. These two parties were so evenly matched that they were often dependent upon the Abolitionists to obtain the necessary votes for the election of their candidate. Our second cousin was often influential in swinging the vote for a candidate the Abolitionist considered more to their liking. This he did very effectively in the elections of 1838. Franklin was a good debater as evidenced in the village Lyceum and other kindred societies. A Boston paper publishing one of his speeches said, "There is no member of the House who can make a better speech than Mr. Poole of South Reading."

He was Secretary of the General Committee at Reading in 1844 when they celebrated the 200th anniversary of the settlement of Reading and vice-president of the 250th celebration, as well as guest of the town. It reminds one of our grandfather and great-grandfather with their keen interest in public affairs. Could it be that my grandfather was familiar with this relative and that he might have named his son Edwin Franklin for this reason.

(Adapted from a Memorial Volume of the 250th Anniversary of the Founding of Reading. A photograph of Franklin was copied in that volume.)

EDWIN VINCE POOLE

Edwin Vince Poole was the eighth generation in our direct ancestry of pioneers in the United States. He was our great-grandfather and the first in our direct line to cross the great Appalachian chain of mountains into the new territory of Wisconsin. It was over 200 years that these ancestors had been multiplying and spreading throughout the New England area. They were a part of the new coastal seaboard bounded on the west by the Appalachian Mountain chain and on the east by the Atlantic Ocean. They were among the early American pioneers who had been busy cutting down the forests, settling in homes and planting crops on the land they had cleared. Their accomplishments consisted of establishing farms, saw mills, grist mills, leather and carriage factories as well as rattan factories to meet their basic needs of food, clothing and shelter.

Now there was a need for more acreage to expand and meet growing competition by acquiring more productive land. By the early 1820's, the colonists had experienced King Philip's War, the French and Indian War, the American Revolution and the War of 1812. These challenges had necessitated close cooperation and the farms were mostly small and clustered together for mutual protection against the common enemies. Now the countryside was becoming relatively safe and pioneers were moving westward where the virgin land was more productive and larger grants could be obtained and were being promoted by the Continental Congress.

The territory west of the Appalachian mountains had been under the control of the French since as early as 1634 when the first explorers moved down the Fox River valley from Green Bay, Wisconsin. They had reached this area via the St. Lawrence waterway and used it extensively for fur trading with the Indians. The French, unlike the English, were not colonizers--they were merchants, traders and explorers. Their territory between the Fox River valley on the east, and the Mississippi River on the west, extended south to the Spanish territory but had only a fraction of the population that existed on the Atlantic seaboard colonized by the English. When the English wrested control of this territory from the French at the culmination of the French and Indian War in 1763, they began to promote settlement there as it had on the Atlantic seaboard. Following the American Revolution and the establishment of independence by the American colonies, conflict continued between the Americans and the English for political control of this western territory. The War of 1812 established the supremacy of the American nation and a migration from the east and an immigration from abroad to this western area began with great impetus. It had been encouraged by the Continental Congress in an act passed by them in 1820 called the Land Grant Act. Under this act several land grant offices were set up in the west where settlers could obtain land grants. A minimum price of $1.25 an acre was set on this land, as well as a stipulation that no less than 80 acres would be granted by the government to one purchaser. It would also have to be purchased for cash. Congress had done a great deal of advertising pertaining to this Act, both at home and abroad. The struggling pioneers in the eastern colonies found this to be a new land of promise.

The New England colonies had been land-locked for over two centuries on the eastern coastal plain because of the natural barrier created by the slopes of the Appalachian chain of mountains. There were dense forests covering those mountains with no established trails, many waterfalls to be portaged, if traveling by canoe, wild animals in abundance, and hostile Indians. The Land Grant Act of 1820 and the wars mentioned above changed all of this for the New England farmers. They were tough pioneers and willing to brave the dangers and hardships of a new land with the thought and hope for future success. Transportation was being improved, particularly the waterways, with many canals following the rivers to lake areas west and south. Steamships, railroads, stage coaches, wagons drawn by horses, or oxen, horseback, and walking on foot, were common modes of transportation. There began a steady stream of westward movement which by 1848 produced enough population and activity to change Wisconsin from a territory to a new state.

When New Englanders, and a few from New York, joined the western stream, all lines of travel were sought which converged at the city of Buffalo, the point of departure of a line of steamers whose western terminus was Milwaukee, or Chicago. Many of the western New Yorkers arrived at Buffalo with their own private conveyance, family and all. Their teams and personal property were taken with them and so they were ready on landing to hitch up and seek their choice of a new home. Some came by stage, but more came by the Erie Canal. Railroads had very poor connections at this time. (1) V. 3 p. 40

How our great-grandfather, Edwin, came to Wisconsin, wedo not know. We do know that he was the seventh child of a family of ten children, born to Daniel Poole on a farm at Belchertown, Massachusetts. He was just past 23 years of age, when, on November 16, 1842, he married Cynthia Willas at Cabotville, Massachusetts and began a life away from the home farm at a place called Jenksville, Massachusetts. Here their first child, Mary Adelaide, was born, September 3, 1844. They lost her the following May. Sorrowed by this loss, they must have caught the migratory fever, and headed west with the rush of emigrants and immigrants, most likely in the Fall of 1845. Edwin was a farmer, and he would want to acquire land in Autumn to be ready early in the Spring for planting crops. His obituary states he settled on a farm in Byron Township, County of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, in 1848, but family records show his second child, Francenia Viola, was born at Byron, Wisconsin, October 5, 1846. A search of Fond du Lac county real estate records reveals the sale of 10 acres of land by Edwin and Cynthia Poole to a Chauncey Brown at Byron on January 16, 1847, showing they had acquired land at an earlier date than 1848, probably in the Fall of 1845. An examination of the 1850 census records finds him at Oakfield, with property (real) valued at $800 and his brother Moses with $700, probably consisting of 80 acres each in Oakfield, with Edwin still holding some property in Byron. A record of a warranty deed issued by him on May 2, 1853, in the Town of Oakfield, to E. C. Olds, for the sale of 40 acres of land, indicates he may have sold half of his acreage to Elijah and purchased another 80 acres to credit him with 120 acres of land. A warranty deed for another 80 acres was issued to Edwin on April 8, 1859.

All indications were that Edwin and Cynthia had prospered in their new home and that both he, and Moses his brother, had received financial help from their parents. (See Will of Daniel Poole following Chapter 7) Willie, our grandfather, was born July 31, 1853, in the Town of Oakfield, and almost three years later their youngest child, Dante, was born on July 3, 1856, also at Oakfield. Two years later Edwin and Cynthia sold 5 acres of land to Angelina Andrews, sister of Edwin, so most of the Poole family seemed to have become centered in this area of Fond du Lac county. The Census of 1850 showed Moses, William and Angelina Poole living in one household in the Town of Byron and Edwin with their two children in the Town of Oakfield. Alvin and Moses had obtained land grants of 80 acres each before 1846, as Alvin died in Iowa on August 10, 1846 and held this acreage then. When Edwin's father died in 1858, all of the family except his son, Daniel, had migrated away from the old Massachusetts homestead.

Great-grandfather was a farmer, and evidently a good one. When he came to Wisconsin, the average population was less than 5 persons per square mile, or a total population of about 250,000 persons when it became a state in 1848. The community of Fond du Lac had less than 2000 people. Agricultural records of 1850 showed little dairying which meant Edwin probably first cut down the trees (as declared in one of the attached letters) and sold them for logs. Then on the cleared land he could plant such crops as wheat, oats, or corn.

Statistics for Wisconsin in 1850 showed 4,000,000 bushels of wheat, 3,000,000 bushels of oats and 2,000,000 bushels of corn produced that year in Wisconsin. Fond du Lac was known as a milling town and Oshkosh as a saw mill town. (1) V. 3 pp.29-30. Real estate was increasing in value with the growth of population and the demand for agricultural land. Census records show that the real estate owned by Moses (probably the 80 acres of land) valued at $700 in 1850 was recorded in 1860 at $1800. This was probaly due in some measure to the improvements made but would still mean almost doubling in value. It would seem the Pooles were in a good location to prosper and were enjoying good family relationships.

Then something seemed to go wrong for Edwin. Evidently they were having marital troubles. Edwin is not included in the Census of 1860, because he, no doubt, was not at home when the census was taken. Early in 1860 (sometime before June as indicated in Edwin's letter of June 20 attached) Cynthia took her youngest child, Dante, who was close to 4 years old, and left Edwin for Patch Grove in Grant County, Wisconsin, to eventually marry Herman Warner, a railroad man residing in that area. What caused the problems must have been a combination of two people, as it usually is, but perhaps predominantly Edwin as we will discuss later. However, we find in the Census of 1850 that Cynthia's father was residing with them and later (in one of his letters to "Eliza") characterizes him as "drunk as usual". Regardless of the causes, Cynthia had left three children in the care of Edwin while she ran off with a small child and another man. What was Edwin to do? He evidently took off to find work and someone to care for the three children. The documentary letters attached indicate his first stop must have been at Rhoda (Eliza) Reed's boarding house where he looked for work and trusted two children to the care of his land lady. The oldest child, Francenia, had been left at Oakfield with his sister and husband.

From Rhoda's boarding house, Edwin went to Stafford, Connecticut where he seemed to be following a construction company for work. His first letter to Eliza came from there, followed by others from Phoenixville and last from Hop River. All of these communities were within a radius of 10 to 20 miles, One must realize that Edwin would have very poor means of transportation in those days and so did not get to see his children whenever he liked. He wrote letters and sent money for the maintenance of his children's care to Eliza. He was evidently absent from his Oakfield residence until November of that year and discusses in his letters the run down condition of the farm when he did get back home.

Edwin seemed to have recovered rather rapidly from the trauma of losing his wife's affection. His brief stay at Rhoda's boarding house seemed to have moved him to write her a very endearing letter from Stafford, Connecticut, as early as June 20, 1846. (See attached letter) She evidently had experienced the same behavior from her husband that Edwin had experienced from Cynthia, and also had children of her own to care for. There began a rapid courtship which culminated in proposed marriage by the end of the summer. Edwin took his children back to Oakfield in November, began clearing land on his acreage, and starting divorce proceedings against his wife. The divorce was obtained in February of the following year and Edwin married Rhoda "Eliza" Reed in April of 1861. (See attached letters and marriage certificate.)

The couple seemed to live a happy life for the next eight years and three more children were born to Rhoda by this second marriage as shown on the family group charts following. Then the same thing happened again to our great-grandfather. Rhoda "Eliza" took her children, when Edwinnie was seven years old (1869) and went to reside, presumably with or near one of her children, in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, leaving our great-grandfather without a wife for a second time. Meantime, in 1867, Edwin had sold the farm in Oakfield, bought 30 acres of land in the Town of Byron and was recorded in the 1870 census as dwelling in Byron with his son, 17 year old Willie. He later married for a third time to Mary Wood, who for sometime had been his housekeeper.

Great-grandmother Cynthia had two children by her second husband, Herman Warner, as listed on the family group charts following. She must have been happy in this second marriage as she lived the rest of her life (20 years) with Herman and saw her new family grow to maturity.

Great-grandmother Rhoda lived the rest of her life in Cedar Rapids, Iowa and outlived Edwin by two years. More detail on the children of these marriages will be discussed in the next chapter. Grandfather seemed to have had a cordial relationship with his half-brother and half-sisters during the years I knew of them.

One is inclined to blame our great-grandmother Cynthia, as did our great-grandfather Edwin, for leaving her children as she did. When the same thing happened the second time, however, you begin to have second thoughts. His third wife evidently remained loyal. She is buried beside him in the Avoca cemetery at Oakfield. What was there about this man that caused his wives, after their many years with him, to take up and leave? After researching seven generations of Edwin's ancestors in Massachusetts, reading some of his personal letters, and recalling some of the things my mother had told me about her grandfather, one naturally draws some conclusions. Among my conclusions, I could not help but feel that great-grandfather was still so much a part of his Puritan and pioneer ancestry that he could not realize women were equal to their husbands in personality and individuality and entitled to some freedom of expression also. His letters to "Eliza" seem to clearly express that in his Bible quotations to her and in his advice regarding the sanctity of the Sabbath. Massachusetts did not consider any suffrage for women before the late 1800's and one must remember that the Pooles had lived in Massachusetts for 200 years. Women were expected to bear children, keep house under the rough pioneer conditions, fight alongside their husbands against the Indians and assume all the other responsibilities of pioneering. The men, however, did the voting, assumed the public offices and engaged in tavern talk and political activity. They were virtually slaves to the men. But as the migration westward came into being and all men in the Puritan colonies were given the right to vote, things began to change. The strict Puritan behavior was no longer enforced and laws became more liberal. Women were no longer punished for such a minor thing as scolding their husband. Great-grandfather probably was not aware of the growth of women's status, and may have treated his wife with the same austerity of his Puritan fathers. My mother used to quote me, "vengeance is mine, saith the Lord, I will repay". I could not help but think, as I read Edwin's letter with this quote, that he had been responsible for my mothers knowing this passage so well. She loved her grandfather dearly and told me how he had so many roses and how she had learned about flowers from him. I believe her lifelong love of flowers (and she cultivated a lot of them) came from this Puritan gentleman. Edwin realized times had changed and he had changed with them in many ways but he did not seem to realize that women wanted a new freedom and recognition also.

In conclusion, and summary, one might look at his obituary. He was credited with being the oldest resident of his community at the time of his death and one of the best known in that part of the country. His granddaughter, Cecil, added to this by stating he had always been active in local politics and was an ardent Republican. She also stated, based on family discussion, that he had been present at the Ripon, Wisconsin convention when the Republican party was formed. If he was, there is no documentation to show he participated in the activities there. That he wanted to be remembered and was proud of his heritage is evidenced by one of the tallest monuments in the local cemetery with Poole in large letters which challenges time.

Edwin Vince Poole (7)

Some of those who knew Edwin attributed him as mean and crusty. My mother did not think so. That he was of tough pioneering Puritan stock one cannot deny. His pioneering efforts, his hard labor, his maintenance of two families of his own and a step-family, his life span of 87 years, all attest to the ruggedness of the man. One has only to look at a photograph of this man shown on the eighth generation division page of this publication to envision something of his character. Here he was at 80 years of age, in front of his home which appeared to be of better than average construction for that day. A rock garden near, a supporting wife with her hand on his shoulder, and a proud look on his countenance. One can hardly see anything in his demeanor except a faith that he had lived by his precepts, that God had been kind to him materially and that he looked to the future without fear. He was a product of his time.

And health for the toils of tomorrow
But a sabbath profaned

O May no clouds of Wo appear
O may no form of sorrow ere

WILLIE VINCE POOLE

1853--1931

OUR GRANDFATHER

Our grandfather, Willie Vince Poole, was born July 31, 1853, at Oakfield, Wisconsin, Fond du Lac County. He was the fourth child in a family of eight children, five by Edwin's first wife and three by his second wife. In addition, Willie was blessed with a half-brother and half-sister by his mother Cynthia's second marriage.

Ever since I can remember, I heard many times how bitter Grandpa was about step-mothers. My mother always tried very hard not to be mean to her step-children because she heard so much about how her father disliked his step-mother, and how mean she was to him. The two years following the coming of the new mother must have been unbearable to him because he stated that at ten years of age he picked up and left home. Exactly where he went, we don't know, but he grew to manhood in the area where he was born and in 1874, at 21 years of age, he married our grandmother, Louisa Marguerite Besaw, in the Town of Lamartine nearby.

There were many things a boy of ten could do in those days, and even when I was ten years of age. The farm was filled with chores that did not require much thinking, or maturity, but just work. This was an era when farms were being settled in this area and the forests had to be cut off the land, stumps removed, homes built and land dug up to prepare for sewing crops. Mechanical equipment was non-existent and a great deal of hoeing and shoveling by hand had to be done after a crude plow had overturned the soil. Many pioneer families would welcome a boy of ten to do chores, pile wood, carry water, round up the cattle and innumerable other tasks. Grandpa was a strong person physically and mentally and survived well in this rough environment, growing to better than average height, muscular and weighing over 200 pounds at maturity. This was the pioneering period in Wisconsin and education was obtained mostly in the "school of hard knocks". But Grandpa learned to read well and I always marveled at how well he knew figures.

The saw mill and the milling industries were thriving also as the trees were cut off and the railroads were developing throughout the territory, so there were these places of employment as soon as he grew a little older. These pioneers matured early in life. He was fond of telling the story of one of his exploits in a bar, or saloon, during his teen years. It seems he liked to stand at the bar and drink beer with his peers but there was an older man who liked to "bully" him by pushing him around physically. Grandpa tried to keep from losing his temper, especially since the person was a big man physically. But one day while he was standing at the bar and the "bully" started in again, (probably putting his finger in Grandpa's beer, or some such) Grandpa could stand it no longer, he swung around with his heavy beer Stein in hand and brought it down full force in the middle of the bully's head. Down went the bully and it took a while for him to regain consciousness. When he did he apologized to Grandpa and that was the end of the bully. And Grandpa grew in respect and stature.

There were many jobs around a saw mill and I suspect that over the years, Grandpa did all of them, as well as those on the farm. Trees were felled with an axe and needed trimming. A boy could do that at a very early age. I drove a team of horses at ten years of age. When the trees were ready for logs, they had to be transported to the saw mill which was done by teams of horses pulling sleds, or wagons, or floated down rivers, if available to the saw mill. (Sawmills were located on rivers for this reason.) There was a mill pond at the edge of the saw mill, which was usually the widening of a river, that could accomodate a large supply of logs. A conveyor belt came down to the pond in a trough like form and logs could be placed on that conveyor by a man wielding a pike at its base on the mill pond. Sharp spikes on the conveyor chain hooked into the logs and transported them up the conveyor to a large circular saw mounted on a carriage. This was the main area of the saw mill and a carriage operator took the carriage back and forth to place the saw at one end of the log and creating strips of lumber from it. The strips of lumber then moved off the carriage to an area of the mill where it could be transported to the mill yard for piling up. Wastefrom cutting the lumber, or the outside of these logs,was known as slab wood and was conveyed to a "chute", which was a big bin to hold the slab wood. The slab wood had been cut into about 4 foot lengths and the bin opened out at the edge of the mill so that the contents could be dumped into a dump truck for transportation to a place in the mill yard where it could be piled up. A boy could drive the horses on the "dump truck". He could also pile up the slab wood which was sold for fire wood. There were no child labor laws when Grandpa was growing up.

At any rate, on September 6, 1875, Willie's first child, Estella was born at Oakfield, Wisconsin, indicating that Grandpa was still living in his old home area where he was born. His obituary indicated that a few years later he moved to Bear Creek, Wisconsin and then to Hatley, Wisconsin, following the lumber industry. It was on the 4th of July 1881, while residing in Bear Creek, that his son was born, my Uncle Ed, named after his grandfather. I never understood for a long time, although I was always thrilled by it as a boy, why grandfather, at the "crack" of dawn on the 4th of July, fired off a "cannon cracker", or large firecracker. It was always a day for a double celebration on his part. His fierce love of independence and arrival of a son to carry on the Poole tradition. We grandchildren grew to love this behavior and always looked forward to the grand and glorious 4th of July.

The next move in January 1885, was away from the sawmill to homestead a 40 acre farm, at Sugar Bush, Wisconsin, in the town of Lebanon, Waupaca county. The 40 acres was covered with dense forests and it was necessary to first make a clearing and construct a log house in which to live. This log house, which became home to him and his family, also added to his family in the form of his third and last child, Aunt Cecil, born in 1893. They lived there until 1903 when he sold it to his son-in-law, Harry Hutchison, Sr., where I, Harry Hutchison, Jr., was destined to be born in February of 1909. He then purchased 80 acres adjoining this farm and sold 20 acres of it to Harry. We find his daughter, Estella and his son-in-law, living on the farm adjoining his, each with 60 acres. They also later participated in organizing a cheese factory in the vicinity of New London, Wisconsin, where they controlled a cooperative effort to market their farm products. He remained on this farm until the end of 1916 when he retired.

This was when I grew to know my grandfather. I could walk to Grandma's any time as it was only 20 acres of ground down the road. Grandma always had "ginger snap" cookies waiting. But Grandpa would get you between his powerful legs and make believe he was crushing you and I'd whoop with joy for the attention. Then there were the chores. It was real fun to stand and watch Grandpa milk cows. It took about an hour after supper, so we had plenty of time and Grandpa began teaching me the multiplication tables, even before I had started school. (It seems there was conflict between my father and I--he was ill and died when I was only seven.)He started me with 1 X 1 = 1, 1 X 2 = 2, etc. Then he said, "now let's take the 2's, 2 X 1 = 2, 2 X 2 = 4, etc." until we reached 2 X 12 = 24. Then we progressed with the 3's, 4's, etc. I can hear him yet and how happy I was when I could repeat them all to him without a mistake. He did not have much formal education but he knew "Readin, Writin and Rithmetic" and he did me a tremendous favor in giving me a fundamental background in mathematics which has served me in good stead over the years.

One of the many other experiences that made me love my grandfather was going to the circus. It was a once a year affair when the circus train pulled into New London and a parade of the animals made before the main event within the tent. New London was 9 miles away and that seemed to us then like a foreigh country would today. It was the signal for "hitching up" the "buckboard" and loading we three children, Daryl, Myrla and I, in the back end of the vehicle and taking off. These were not rubber tired vehicles and there were no cushions, but you wouldn't find any happier kids then we. There was chatter for a long time on the elephants, giraffes and monkeys.

Grandfather was a rough and ready pioneer. He was not looking for a fight but would not walk away from one. He was an avowed aetheist, but he always stood for fair play and honesty. He used strong curse words in every other sentence but no one took them seriously. I loved it when he would say, "Behave, or I'll cut your liver out and eat it for breakfast" because I knew Grandpa was just fooling. Another favorite expression when something was passed to him at the dinner table was, "thank you, damn you." It was a man's world for Grandpa from 10 years on and he had to be tough. The fact that Grandma gave up her Catholic faith to live with him for over 50 years with him cursing fluently and ridiculing her faith, has made me feel he must have had a lot to offer in other ways. I never heard of any violent treatment, and I never saw Grandma go into the barn, unless it would be to gather some eggs which got there inadvertently.

Grandfather always believed in following the law. (Could it be possible this was some of his Puritan heritage?) He advised me at an early age to stay away from the courts. One of his earliest experiences with the law, I liked to hear over and over. It seems his cattle got astray for lack of fences which was common in those days. They wandered on to Bill Van Vorsts' property. Bill put them in his corral and when Grandpa came looking for them he was met by Bill with a revolver in hand demanding payment for their damage. Grandpa tried to run but tripped over one of his untied shoestrings. He then picked up a stick and threw it at Bill, knocking the revolver from his hand to the ground and moved toward him. Bill went back in his house and soon came out with another revolver in his hand and said, (this is where we kids howled with delight) "I've got one here that will drill a hole clear through you and 70 rods beyond." In the meantime Grandpa had gotten the cows loose and ducked through the trees for home. Bill had him in court with a charge of trespassing and hitting him with a fence rail. I think this was one of Grandpa's first experiences with the courts and he was trying to warn me of the time and cost of such an experience.

The next thing he was warning me about was alcoholism. I have heard that at one time Grandpa liked his whiskey but I never saw him drink any. He also told me at one time that he had never had so much to drink that he didn't know what he was doing and didn't think anybody else did either. The Volstead Act of Prohibition days went into effect in 1919 and that means I must have been about 10 years old at that time. Grandpa once said to me, "When a law was passed making the sale of whiskey illegal, except for medicinal purposes, I quit drinking. I have always believed in obeying the law." Actually, I think he was just trying to show that he had will power enough not to give in to impulses which he knew were harmful. To substantiate this, I think of another episode which he related to me about smoking. When he was younger, he must have been quite a smoker and particularly with a pipe. He said, "One day I asked myself, who is boss, me, or my pipe?" He put the pipe in his pocket, along with a package of tobacco and determined not to smoke again. He did not but he kept the pipe and tobacco within reach just to make sure he knew who was boss. He was a man of very strong will power and a desire for fair play among men. His activity as a successful Justice of the Peace for the Town of Lebanon for 20 years is ample proof of this. He served in this capacity from 1897 to 1917 when he moved from the community. This necessitated being elected every two years so he must have done a pretty good job to be reelected 10 times.

Grandfather was a self-made man. He read a lot. He could discuss any topic of the day. His daughter, Cecil, felt he would have made a good lawyer if he had had an opportunity for an education. He was very active in public affairs for his community. He had law books which he studied and used when serving as Justice of the Peace. He is credited in his obituary with being one of the first Republicans in the Town of Lebanon and one of the first in Waupaca County. His daughter Cecil claimed he helped organize the Republican Party in Wisconsin and traveled to political gatherings with Congressman Brown and E. W. Hatten, wealthy lumberman and prominent Wisconsin Republican. He served as a school clerk in District No. 3 of the Town of Lebanon for many years. He did much to see that politics did not favor just one group of people in the community as it was rumored the Irish Democrats tended to do. He was always a staunch supporter of the Republican Party and attended conventions, both state and national many times as a delegate for this party. He was the official Census Taker for his district in 1900 as I have his silver identification badge to testify. After remembering how active his father was in politics and the fact that he lived with, or near, his father until he married probably explains why he belonged to the party he did. The Pooles were not much for advertising their achievements but they were active individuals in their community affairs.

In January 1917, Grandfather sold his farm and a short while later moved to Wausau where again he worked in a sawmill directing logs from the mill pond up into the mill. After five years in Wausau, he returned to his former area and purchased a home in New London where he resided for some time. The last two years of his life, he rented his home in New London and moved to his two daughters in the Town of Lebanon where they were residing in adjoining farm homes. It was at the home of his daughter Estella, in 1931, that he suffered his last illness and died later in a New London hospital. So it was, that after 9 generations of Pooles, we still find a Poole like our John I, pioneering in lumbering and farming and enjoying their great love for independence and freedom.

Grandpa left us when I was in my second year of college but during those two years, he live a greater portion of his time with my parents on their farm in the Town of Lebanon. When I had vacation from school and came home, it was a privilege and pleasure to have some mature conversations with this intelligent ancestor of mine. He kept on current events religiously and would get quite upset if he did not get his newspaper regularly, or someone would rumple it up before he got it in his possession. I remember once when the paper didn't arrive he was "cussing", and saying, "one doesn't know whats going on in the world". We did not have radio, or television, so the newspaper was the main media at that time for us.

He declared himself an aetheist and had probably been influenced by the writings of Robert Ingersoll, which were popular at that time. One can understand, however, with the lack of exposure to church life in the wilderness where he existed this could readily happen. One of his favorite expressions was, "All the heaven and hell you get, you get right here on this earth." He had plenty of both, but in the years that followed grandmother's death, one could see many changes in the rough exterior of the man, perhaps because of a guilt complex. After 50 years of companionship with grandmother, it was hard for him not to still envisage her and the ways in which he had treated her. It was rumored that he called for a priest before his death.

There were perhaps two factors that played a strong part in his death at an earlier age than would have needed to be. They were, first of all, misdirected strong will power, and second, lack of faith in medical science. Willie, or "Old Bill", as they often called him, had no use for doctors or hospitals. He had always been strong and healthy and mistrusted an operation, or medical assistance of any kind, just as he had mistrusted the existence of a supreme being. Grandfather had a bad hernia ever since I can remember, and wore a truss, or mechanical device to make himself operable. There was an excellent surgeon in the area who had wanted to operate on the hernia for years but grandpa would have no part of it. In his 78th year, he had gotten thinner and the hernia could no longer be retained and he was forced to submit to surgery.

The operation was successful but they could not get grandfather to cooperate during post surgery. He jumped out of bed after the surgery and wanted to go home and in doing so reopened the wound causing gangrene to set in. Mother stated that when she went to see him in the hospital, he displayed his upper leg and said, "Lood what the S. O. B.'s are doing to me. He was referring to the numerous needle marks from injecting anaesthetics to try to keep him from too much movement. Because of his strong will power, it was difficult to overcome his consciousness. He was not able to leave the hospital on his own power but died because of his fierce independence and lack of cooperation. That same strong spirit of independence and will power seems to have moved on to his children and his grandchildren.

OTHER GENERATION IX MATERIAL

Marcia Bradway Dalin, grandaughter of Dante Poole, my grandfather's younger brother, has this to say about Dante Poole. "Dante Poole and family came to Washington (state of) in 1901 and lived for a year or two in Salmon Creek, about five miles north of Vancouver, Washington, then moved to a farm 4½ miles east of La Center, Clark Co., Washington."

"At the time Dante decided to leave Wisconsin, he was working in a soap factory in St. Paul, Minnesota and had to go 80 miles by train to be with his family. Their home in Boyceville, Wisconsin, was a small farm not profitable for a living. About 19 other families from the area moved at the same time, coming by train. Included were the Bradways, whose son, Millard Leroy, married Dante's daughter Ida May on September 15, 1904 at the Poole farm home."

Dante had gone to Patch Grove, Wisconsin, with his mother Cynthia, when Cynthia left Edwin to marry Herman Warner.

Angelina Poole, older sister of Willie V. married William Reed, who served as a private in Co. H, 5th Regiment, Wisconsin Volunteers from August 29, 1864 to June 20, 1865, in the Civil War. He was a step-brother of his wife, Angelina Adaresta Poole.

Francenia Viola Poole, grandfathers oldest living sister during the Civil War period, married Charles E. Wallen, who enlisted in the Civil War August 6, 1862 at Kalamazoo, Michigan in Company H, 25th Regiment of Infantry and was discharged June 24, 1865 at Salisbury, N. C.

ESTELLA MAY POOLE

MY MOTHER

My mother was one of the last of a long line of Poole pioneers. Beginning with John Poole and his arrival in the Boston area in 1630, when our country was a complete wilderness, we see them traversing the country from coast to coast. Mother's grandparents came to Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin in the middle of the 19th century when the area was still covered with forests and by the time she was born in 1875, the land was probably being cultivated and buildings had been erected. She was 10 years old when her father homesteaded 40 acres of solid forest land in the Town of Lebanon in Waupaca County, Wisconsin. One can imagine a girl of this age, surrounded entirely by pine forests, (Indians and wild animals) watching her father cut down trees to build a log cabin in which to live. This is what had to be done. No buildings, no water, no modern conveniences. Oxen were beasts of burden, dynamite and crudely constructed tree stump pullers were used to remove the huge roots of the old pine trees. One needed to be tough to survive. My mother was that. I can still hear her say, after six children by her first husband and raising four step-children, "I'm tougher than a boiled owl". After my discussion of her pioneer father, you can guess where the expression may have originated.

Most parents, I am sure will agree, want the most for their children that it is possible for them to get. Grandpa Poole wanted his girls to marry well and was very active in trying to achieve that. The Hutchisons were considered among the most respectable pioneers in the area, and Grandpa must have been pleased when mother married my father, at 18 years of age, even though he was 15 years her senior. Father was the youngest of 8 children and his mother's baby. He was also the one to inherit his father's homestead at his death in 1889, which was 120 acres of what was considered to be some of the best land in Outagamie County. Grandpa Hutchison had four sons and each one had inherited, or was given a farm of his own. (All in Outagamie County.)

Within one day (March 24, 1895) of their first wedding anniversary, Fay Hutchison arrived. What a joy it must have been to my father in the Town of Maple Creek. It was almost two years later (Feb. 18, 1897) when the second child, Mona, arrived. It was to be another seven years before the next. It is easy to see why these two sisters were always very close.

One can only speculate on some of the events that took place following this period. Before moving from Cleveland, Ohio to Wisconsin in 1851, grandfather Hutchison had been a clock and watch maker in that city. His wife, my grandmother, engaged in quite a bit of social drinking and had become an alcoholic. Grandfather felt if he moved to the wilds of Wisconsin, he could get her away from such activity. It did not work that way, however, and she must have caused grandfather Hutchison untold misery. My mother related many stories of her activities to me and they must have been quite unpleasant. Grandfather Hutchison died in 1889 and grandmother gravitated between her children until her death in 1900 but my father was her baby and his farm was the original home, so grandmother must have been with her baby more than any of the others. Presumably she regained reasonable control after her husbands death but must have been something to cope with in the young married life of my mother.

Mother always wanted to be close to her parents and wanted her children close to her. When her mother-in-law passed away in 1900, she must have wanted this more than ever. Father's home was only 10 miles at the most from where her parents were but this seemed like a long way in those days--with no cars. Mother didn't handle a horse and buggy either and that is how they would have to be transported. Father never liked farming and especially some of the memories of the old homestead. When his mother died he was even less enchanted with the old home and would like to have become a salesman. Mother would have nothing but the farm and would never consent to living in a city, or settlement. So father joined with his father-in-law and promoted a cheese factory in the neighborhood of New London where cooperative marketing of their dairy products might be established. He then made plans to sell the old homestead and take over the 40 acres grandfather had cleared in the Town of Lebanon, west of Sugar Bush about a mile. This had been mother's home before marriage and still was. Grandfather Poole bought 80 acres adjoining his original 40 acres and sold 20 of that to my father, making two 60 acre farms adjoining each other. Mother was now happy.

This transfer took place in 1903 and mother's dream of being near her parents was fulfilled. There followed in the next year, September 6, 1904, on mother's birthday, the birth of a third baby girl, Mura. Mura left us at 7 months as a result of the then dreaded Scarlet Fever. By 1906, however, mother's family continued with Daryl, in October, Harry in February of 1909, and then the youngest, Myrla in March of 1913. Mother's family was complete and she was living where she wanted to live. The old log cabin her father had built. Her husband's homestead was of frame construction and much more comfortable by modern standards. But mother was a born pioneer.

Thirteen years went by in this old log house where I was born and I had reached seven years of age. I remember many things about that old home.

I remember a fairly good sized "sitting room" in front from which a stairway led to an upstairs bedroom, another bedroom was just off this "sitting room". Then a partition between this and the added on kitchen had an opening framed with a doorway that gave privacy by means of a curtain across it. Around this I used to peek when Al Hoffmann used to court my sister Mona. After he gave me some candy I refrained from "peeking". Daryl and I would be pestering mother when she was trying to scrub the old pine floor in the kitchen which had no covering. She had an old fashioned mop and when about half of the floor was looking white and nice, who went tracking on it--Harry & Daryl. I can still see her making us sit on two chairs until she finished so she could keep an eye on us. I can remember when Mona eloped and we were all waiting up until they came back from their whirlwind marriage. I fell asleep and father had to take me up to bed even though I didn't want to go. He said he'd rest with me till they came and I fell asleep and didn't get to see them that night. To a lot of people it would have looked rough but it was comfortable and we were not in want. We got a bath on Saturday night in the wash tub. The water had to be pumped from some distance away from the house and carried in pails for use. The fuel was wood which had to be obtained by cutting down trees, sawing them up, and splitting chunks into stove wood. The water was heated in a reservoir attached to the cast iron stove. There was an old water trough close to the small frame barn with a well adjoining and the pump spout above the trough. The trough was made of wood and one would wonder how it held water. Pumping water in this for the livestock was quite a job.

Mother was working outside most of the time at one thing, or another. I remember one Fall, she was cutting up pumpkins (big ones) with a long bladed kitchen knife, when the knife slipped and cut her hand. I can still see the blood. She had heavy varicose veins on her legs and one night she almost bled to death when one of the arteries broke open. But that didn't stop her from working hard. She loved that farm. She wanted her boys to be farmers, but neither Daryl nor I had any inclination in that direction. Father never liked the farm. As a young man he worked in the woods as a lumberjack. He became a riverman, which was a log rolling type of job, one who broke up log jams on the river. When I got to know him he was crippled up with rheumatism and not able to work to his satisfaction. He hated to see mother doing so much outside work but mother would not consent to his moving to town to take work. He did do some sales work, however, and managed the cheese factory indicated above. It bothered him a lot that mother had to work so hard.

Mother's folks retired from the farm about 1915 and grandfather moved to Wausau, Wisconsin where he obtained employment again in a saw mill. This must have left mother very lonely. She had a first cousin, Linda Besaw Ruckdashel, who lived in Birnamwood, Wisconsin. They had been more like sisters and had visited back and forth for many years with happy relationships. Linda had kept one of my sisters while she attended high school in Birnamwood and the folks would furnish them with a butchered hog, or produce, which helped their economic situation. Her husband was Garrett Ruckdashel and Garrett was maintenance man at the local high school and very much sold on education. My sister became a rural school teacher and allowed me in her school at 3½ years of age. Birnamwood was also fairly close to Wausau where mother's parents had moved. I imagine that this fact, along with the close friendship with Linda, was instrumental in her convincing my father to sell their home and buy another in Birnamwood. They bought another 40 acres of land at Birnamwood and mother convinced father that truck gardening would work real good there. Mother had learned gardening real well over the years and for about a year we raised garden products and marketed them in the nearby village of Birnamwood. Father, however, just couldn't stand to see mother work the way she did. He was in poor health and at one time an alcoholic. He began to hate himself and in 1916, not too long after moving to Birnamwood, he destroyed himself by taking poison. Mother was left with three small children, Daryl 10, Harry 7, and Myrla three. What was she to do?

Her oldest daughter, Fay, had a large farm house that had been the old Stroessenreuther homestead. She did not have any children at the time of father's death and made a temporary home for mother and her three small children. Mother settled father's estate and then tried to procure employment doing house work, the only thing she was trained for. She found employment with a tenant farmer, John Patient, who had five small children ranging in age from three to ten years. He had lost his wife early in 1917 and they were badly in need of tender, loving care. My mother gave them just that, along with the house work, and this went on for about a year. She had come to love the new family but had been warned by her father never to become a stepmother. She not only loved the children but she had also began to love the handsome and romantic young Englishman who had come to this country in 1911 and still spoke and acted in true English style. About a year later from the time she first met this man and at the ripe age of 40 years, she took on the responsibility of rearing 8 small children by marrying John Patient, in August 1918, at Birnamwood, Wisconsin.

Dad Patient, whom I never could accept in my childhood days, and whom I felt was favoring his family more than mother's over the years, could be very likable. He was musical by nature, could play the accordion without music, and sang well. He had sung in the church choir in England and had a good voice. His first wife, Elizabeth Richardson, was the daughter of a Vicar in the Church of England. His children inherited his ear for music and could get music out of a piano, or accordion, too. We often gathered in a circle and Dad played and sang, while we joined in. By the same token, he could be just as extreme in the opposite direction. He could be brutal and stubborn. He boasted of being a "Johnny Bull", the nickname for a stubborn Englishman. He was a patient man, as his name implied, but when he lost his temper it was hard to believe he was the same man. He administered unreasonable punishment to we children, he threatened mother with suicide, which upon one occasion I remember, mother was on her knees begging him to think better. They argued long and loud quite often, after we children were in bed. It was mostly over what one or the other's children had done but there was also strong economic pressure. Dad was without material wealth when mother married him and it was her money that bought her father's old farm. There was a mortgage on the farm and it was held in title by my mother. Not one cent was applied on the mortgage over the 20 years for which it run and during which time there had been years of good income. They had done well on the 60 acres with truck gardening for a period but Dad did not like that kind of work. (With the children, this worked well.) So Dad rented another 120 acres and worked like a demon, thinking to prosper. He had to have modern machinery as farming was moving from horse power to tractors. Automobiles were becoming a necessity, so he had to buy a pleasure car and a truck. Then came the agricultural depression of the 1920's and prices went to rock bottom. Farm strikes occured, milk was dumped on the ground for lack of getting cost of production. There were a lot of mouths to feed and the interest rates on the mortgages ran high. So after 20 years of this mother lost her farm for the face of the mortgage foreclosure. She said when they were forced off her farm: "I will never feel at home again."

What motivated mother, in spite of all the counseling from her father, to become a step-mother, is hard to understand. It can be explained only in one word--Love. Mother tried with all the power she had not to be a cruel step-mother such as Grandpa Poole said he had. But Mary ran away from home and hid over night while everyone was searching for her. Mother felt she was needed outside more than inside (which she was) and left the housework and cooking to Mary. It was just too much for Mary, but so was cleaning the barns before breakfast for 20 head of cattle, which I was assigned to.

Mother supervised the production of acres of sugar beets in which we children could help with hoes to do necessary blocking of plants, pulling them out and cutting off tops. Dad was busy with the tractor and machinery working the land and transporting materials. There were long days for all of us, 4:00 a. m. in the summer until 9:00 in the evening. Mother milked cows, we did not have a milking machine. She worked in the fields supervising the children to raise cucumbers, sugar beets, beans and strawberries. She pushed wheel barrows full of manure to the garden and worked the soil to get good vegetablesfor table use. She always had a big flower garden from which she furnished many funeral bouquets. This was her hobby. Mother knew how to make money but she didn't know how to manage it. She always depended on a man for this. Mother had to have a man and she had found one whom she loved dearly, as well as all the children involved. How she kept her sanity with all the escapades of the years, one wonders. She tried in every way she knew how to bring her children up right and that family and her garden were her whole life. Dad's oldest daughter came home to have a baby because her husband had no income. She died from complications of this first birth. His oldest son, Ronald, was killed by his own brother in a shooting accident. Daryl, mothers' oldest brought his wife home for child birth because he was lacking the wherewithal also. Life was just a bowl of cherries, but mother was the pits.

Mother was a mixture of her father's and mother's traits, as most of us are. She read a lot, like her father, and exerted the same strenth of will power, stubborness and pioneer spirit. She worked in the fields like a man and helped in the barn which her mother had never done. Grandmother was a fallen away Catholic, in order to satisfy grandfather, but she maintained her faith and passed it on to her daughter. She said to me many times, "My God is with me, He has always carried me through trouble and always will." She had the same infinite patience which my grandmother had in submitting to grandfathers' cussing and swearing at her over all those years. She loved her husband and she believed the man was the head of the household. She inherited the patriarchal philosophy which had come down through those generations of Pooles and still smacking of a part of the old Puritan concepts.

Mother found little solace in church because we were 9 miles from the nearest church of our denomination. There were two churches within traveling distances (remember horse and buggy days), the Irish Catholic and the German Lutheran. We were baptized Lutheran but mother never felt comfortable there.

When I was a child in their Sunday School, German sermons were still being delivered. Most of the ladies conversed in German and my mother could not understand a word. Sometimes, she felt, they might be ridiculing her without her knowledge. But mother retained her faith. She taught me, as soon as I could learn, the Lord's Prayer. I have missed few nights in my life on retiring without remembering and saying this prayer. The faith her mother gave to her, she gave to me. It has carried me through many rough days.

When Dad Patient left us in 1954, mother went down hill rapidly. She had always feared losing her memory and mental facilities, as had one of her grandmothers. She had a remarkable memory and maintained her facilities until about a year and a half before she died. We had to put her in a nursing home at that time and I could hardly believe this was my mother from then on. The last time I went to see her, shortly before her death, I said, "Mother, shall we look to God." She replied, "No, my God has left me, I don't have any God anymore." My second attempt was, "Shall we pray together, 'Our Father who art in heaven'". Mother picked up from there and went through to the end of the prayer. She then wished me success and I left. Those were my last moments with my mother and we laid her to rest in a little over two years from the time Dad Patient left us. May she have come to be with Jesus in the saying of that prayer.

EDWIN FRANKLIN POOLE

MY UNCLE ED

Edwin Franklin Poole, or my "Uncle Ed", was born on the 4th of July 1881. This says a lot! It summarizes an independent spirit created by a background of nine generations of pioneering Pooles. He was the 10th in line of a group of pioneers who had cut down the forests, fought the Indians and the ravages of nature across the country from the frontiers in Massachusetts and Connecticut to his father's frontier home in Waupaca County, Wisconsin. All Uncle Ed wanted, as his forefathers had wanted, was a chance to be acknowledged as a free human being, to earn a living that would enable him to marry, raise and educate a family, and be respected by those around him. This is what the first Pool in America wanted and that is what most true Americans want.

But times were changing. "Gone were the roving buffalo, the wild prairies were no more." More education was needed, larger communities were developing with new opportunities for the finer things in life. The pioneering period was being replaced by new developments including, mechanization of equipment, new industrial activity, better social conditions such as shorter working hours, more pay and better living quarters. My Uncle Ed grew to maturity in this changing world. It was a world that did not allow the individual freedom of previous generations and which required more than sheer physical strength and manual labor to succeed. Extended education beyong the three R's was becoming a necessity for handling many occupations and submission to authority which was difficult to reconcile with individual freedom of choice.

Uncle Ed was a very intelligent man and clear minded right up to the end of his long life. He had many aptitudes but little formal education. One of the first stories I heard about my Uncle's ability was one in the musical area. The story was that he went into a store where they sold musical supplies. He became interested in a violin that was for sale. The proprietor of the store said it was out of tune but otherwise a good instrument. Uncle Ed picked it up, and although he had had no musical training, he adjusted the strings to his liking and soon had played a melody on it. I often wondered how much he could have achieved in that area if he had help in school as the younger generation of today have. My sister Fay and myself loved to hear him play melodies on the harmonica, one of which he usually had around. His wife realized this inherited ability and made an accomplished pianist out of his son Edwin Allan. Edwin Allan used to enjoy vacationing at my sister Fay's home on her Town of Lebanon farm and used that occasion to tune her piano for her. That required some expertise because the piano was in a closed off room during the winter season leaving it in pretty poor tune by spring. The last time I saw my uncle was in the autumn of 1964 when my wife and I took my sister Fay with us on a visit to see him and Gladys and Edwin in Spokane, Washington. Fay asked him to play a tune on his "mouth organ". He had a harmonica handy and he played a tune very well and then remarked, "The Kentucky Waltz". This happened to be a melody that was popular when I lost my brother in Kentucky and he had danced many times to it. I felt, then, it would be our last communication and it was. Uncle left us early in 1966 after a protracted period of illness.

The second episode I remember, which really impressed me as a child, was when my uncle came riding to my grandpa's on a motorcycle and clothed in a policeman's uniform. A policeman was a pretty unusual and important person to me then and probably the first one I had ever seen. I have often wondered how he got the job and how he learned the law. I know a little more about politics now and that his father was Justice of the Peace in the Town of Lebanon for 20 years. A lot more of his father rubbed off on uncle than one would have thought. I also marveled as a youngster that Uncle Ed knew the answer to almost any current problem in world affairs. Again, I see my grandfather and his educational ability. Edwin was enterprising, he was not afraid of people but he could be arbitrary. The independent spirit of his forefathers was still too unsophisticated for the new trend. So with this independent attitude he lost many job opportunities but with his intelligent approach he soon impressed a new employer to give him another opportunity. Some of these positions were as a steam fitter for a large corporation, a maintenance supervisor in publicaand private institutions, night watchman for and industrial plant, policeman and bartender.

Uncle Ed would take a few drinks but he was never an alcoholic and he was deathly afraid of drugs. He had a cousin that had become a drug addict and he always remembered some of the horrible experiences that she had. As an elderly person in the hospital, or at home, he would suffer a great deal of pain and refuse medication if he felt there was any possibility of drug addiction. His pay checks from his occupation were brought home to his wife and he had her do the fiscal honors in purchasing their home and trying to give his family the education he would have liked to have had. His nieces and nephews in the country were invited to visit, and did visit, his home in the near by city of Appleton, and stayed over night at times. I enjoyed his teasing manner and "roughing up" which he gave me and which reminded me of his father, my grandpa. He would call me "Meggy", which was a nickname given me by my first cousin, Roydon Stroesenreuther, when he could not pronounce the name Meredith, the name by which I went until I entered high school. Uncle Ed brings back many fond recollections. My sister Fay was probably his favorite niece and he her favorite uncle. When Aunt "Kit" passed away, uncle stored much of his personal property in the attic of her farm home temporarily and was there often.

After Aunt "Kit" died he was lost and rather aimless for awhile. He started a tavern in his sister Estella's vacant farmhouse near Sugar Bush, Wisconsin and earned a living there for awhile. (Estella and John Patient were renting a larger farm and residing there with their family.) After a period near his sisters and nieces and nephews, he seemed to gain a new lease on life and remarried. He married Ida Randall, a widow, and the mother-in-law of Mary Patient Randall, whom he had met at his sister Estella's residence. He opened a shoe repair shop in Weyauwega, Wisconsin but disposed of that in 1940 and moved to Spokane, Washington to be near his son, Edwin. He obtained a job there taking care of an apartment building and worked at that for a year but his second wife was dissatisfied there, her children being in Wisconsin. Ida came back to Wisconsin and obtained a divorce in 1941. Uncle Ed then moved to a new location in Spokane and worked in a shoe repair shop for awhile and later as a bartender in a tavern. He remained in Spokane until his death in 1966.

His son, Edwin, who I am sure knew him better than anyone else, summarized his father's life in an autobiography of himself entitled, "In One Man's Lifetime", as follows:

"When Edwin Allan was born, 1 April 1903, in Kaukauna, Edwin Franklin was working for the railroad, washing engine boilers in the local roundhouse. He soon moved to Fond du Lac where he became a motorman on the street car line. After some time, they moved to New London. Katie found out early in her married life that her new husband would probably never stay on one job for too long a time. But he was never out of work. He seemed to have a lot of skills--and a quick temper. In New London, he worked at the chair factory. There was a black man working there (the only one in New London). He pulled a knife on Edwin Franklin, who was able to take care of himself although he did sustain a cut. This made them feel negroes were not to be trusted."

"In 1908 they moved to Webster City, Iowa, where they stayed with Katie's sister and husband on a farm. Edwin Franklin got a job working for a neighbor. Later in Webster City, Katie got a job with California Perfume Co.--now Avon-- Edwin Franklin? 1909 back to New London. March 1911, moved to Wausau. Edwin Franklin followed usual work pattern of doing well on a job for a time, then getting mad at boss and telling him off. Worked at saw mill, running street roller in paving city streets, custodian of Elks Club building, policeman patrolling streets of Wausau as the first motorcycle policeman and finally in charge of heating plant at Marathon County Asylum. Katie again sold California Perfume Company products and took china painting lessons. Willie Poole and wife moved to Wausau in 1916. Edwin Franklin moved back to New London in 1918 and worked at the Borden Condensery. Edwin Allan stayed in Wausau with grandfather to finish high school education. Edwin Franklin moved to Appleton in 1922 and worked as a steam fitter for Kimberly Clark Paper Company. Katie was giving china painting lessons. They moved to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, in 1929, where Katie's favorite sister lived. Edwin Franklin found work and Katie a contract for a teaching job. She had gone to college after Edwin Allan finished at Lawrence College in Appleton, Wisconsin. However, her health kept her from fulfilling that contract. She died March 16, 1930."

He ends his account of his father as follows:

"Edwin Franklin did jump from job to job but was never out of work. He did not drink, or gamble. When he got paid, he would bring home his pay, give it to his wife who would give him back enough for tobacco and gas for motorcycle, or car. Everything he did was for the welfare of the family."

One cannot help but think in conclusion of the song made famous by George Cohan which went in part, "I'm a grand old nephew of my Uncle Sam, born on the 4th of July." Uncle Ed was born on the glorious 4th and it seems he could never forget that, just as his father had never been able to forget it.

GENERATION XI

The eleventh generation of Pooles were moving into a new era and a change in occupational interests. By the year 1900, most of the forests had been cleared away in Wisconsin, the lumberjacks were becoming farmers, and a new agricultural era was emerging. Though these were "horse and buggy days", they were prosperous and the farmers led an abundant life. The oldest of the Hutchison offspring in this generation, namely; Fay and Mona, became farmers' wives and raised their families on the farm. Agriculture prospered and for 20 years, up to and including World War I, the farm was a good place to be and incomes kept increasing. New inventions and farm equipment were making it easier to farm and farms getting bigger and more productive.

After World War I farm prices began to decline, probably due to countries which had been engaged in war for four years beginning to produce their own farm products again, and due to improved methods of production which caused the supply of farm products to outgrow the demand for them. By 1920, we began to experience an agricultural depression which preceded the industrial depression by almost 10 years. People who bought their farms during the period of high prices and assumed a mortgage on it were beginning to feel the pinch. It also became necessary to replace their horse power with mechanical power and farm machinery that was expensive and built their mortgages still higher. My mother and step-father found themselves in this position. A high percentage of farmers became bankrupt during this period and my parents fell in this category. After seeing my family work all those long hours for all those long years, and then go down the drain, I became forever hateful of the farm.

How well I remember, even after all these years, when we had to withhold our milk from sale during a farmers' strike in this period. The farmers Cooperative Milk Pool were striking to get the cost of production for the farmer. If farmers in our vicinity dared to truck their milk to the condensery, it was stopped along the way and the milk emptied on the ground. With 20 head of milking cows it was our family income and I thought I would never like cottage, or "dutch" cheese as we called it, again. Milk cans full for that purpose and with no income coming in, we had to use it for food. No wonder poor Dad almost went crazy.

HARRY MEREDITH HUTCHISON
1909--

MY CHILDHOOD

My childhood was not one to develop a normal personality. But it did develop a determination to be somebody.

My mother almost died when I was born and I became the poorest physical specimen of her children. My brother was 3 years older than I and full of exuberance and personality. Everyone among the visiting relatives loved him and caressed him but Mother was about the only one, outside of cousin Sarah Hutchison, who paid any attention to me. Father (papa) took us with him in the "buckboard" to the cheese factory to deliver milk and on the seat of the manure spreader but his strict discipline otherwise offset the love created by these occasions. He was always disciplining me and I was always rebelling--and running away. Papa was stiff with rheumatism as I remembered him and I could easily outrun him when he came to punish me. I learned later that his physical condition was brought on by alcoholism dating to his days as a riverman when he was in spring water up to his waist regularly and from a first attempt at suicide. At seven years of age, I can remember vividly that long buggy whip which he started toward me with when I accidently chipped one of my brothers' front teeth by throwing a stone. He said, "I'll teach you to throw stones", but before he could get to me, I ran to my mother and jumped in her lap and the buggy whip never came down. I lost my father at seven years of age in his second and successful attempt at suicide (by taking Paris Green poisin) and mother became the only real confidante I ever had until my wife came along over 20 years later. Mother later said I was about a nervous wreck by then.

My next remembrance of my childhood was with my sister Fay. Fay had been the pride and joy of papa because she became a rural school teacher and married a very personable as well as affluent farmer. She was also his first born and the second mother in the family. There were many family gatherings at her big farmhouse in the Town of Lebanon. So when papa died and mother went to work at the only thing she knew(housekeeping) for a farmer in the area, Fay offered to keep me. Fay had been my first school teacher at the age of 3½ years but even then I had said, " no sister of mine is going to tell me what to do". As she tried to discipline me, it became a continued nightmare of my fathers' domination.

Fay had been a good school teacher but a psychologist she was not. She sent me upstairs alone in what to me was a haunted area because my father had been displayed in a casket in the room just below where I had to traverse a stairway nightly with the old kerosene lamp. I can still experience a stiffness as I think of blowing out that kerosene lamp and making that short trip getting to bed and pulling the covers over my head. I expected my papa to materialize at any minute. (I had read Tales from Shakespeare by Charles Lamb much too early, especially the pictures of ghosts.) I could tell no one about these experiences as I thought they would only laugh at me. My brother-in-law was probably the closest to any father image I ever had. But I wouldn't want to have him think I was a baby. So I went on with my nightmares and my regular razor strappings from my sister--even to the point of having to get the strap myself. So I played Lone Scout and ran away from my sister and lived in a lean-to in the woods during the day.

Then came the third phase of my childhood when my mother remarried. The problems of Mother and Dad Patient have been covered in my discussion of Estella Poole. My story from 8-12 years of age is one of constant conflict with my step-relationship and with my own brother. Ronald and Daryl would gang up on me, probably because they were close to an age and had more in common. For one illustration, they would be shocking up grain and would make me handle one section alone as big as the one both of them worked at. Daryl had always bullied me, making me carry his dinner pail to school and his coat if it got too warm to wear--or bop! When Dad could find a reason, he slapped me around, usually on a falsehood, or supposed injustice to one of his children. I shall always remember when I was knocked down and then kicked until my pants were wet. I was not capable of milking cows correctly but my step-brother was so I had to clean the barns for 20 head of cattle before breakfast in the morning. I learned what manure is and I began developing a real hatred for the farm environment. It was daylight in the morning until darkness at night during those hot summers working the fields for strawberries, beans, cucumbers sugar beets and other harvesting.

There were many happy hours during this childhood too, even though they were overshadowed by constant conflict between two quite different types of families living under the same roof. Sundays we had picnics to the river, or at Fays or Monas or at home. Once in a while during the summer we would get down to the creek to the "old swimming hole". There were card parties on Saturday nights during the winter season. This was a gathering of farm neighbors and all children went along and played at an early age in the card games. A mile or so away there was a big family around our age with whom we went back and forth to play baseball, slide down hill on farm driveways during the winter and just plain hide and seek. Skating on the creek beds was fun also, if the snow didn't come too soon and cover the ice. Probably one of the things I remember most was family group singing while

Dad Patient played the accordian and taught us some of the songs he sang in England. Such as: "The Bells were Ringing the Old Year Out and the New Year In", "Irish Molly Oh", "There'll Always be an England" and many popular songs. Mother, too, knew many fascinating ballads with about 10 verses. "The Chicago Fire" was one. Time in the field hoeing went faster when Mother would teach me all the verses to: "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight".

One of the other aggravations which I remember so well is the name by which I was known up to the time of entering high school--Meredith. My first name was the same as fathers and so to keep from confusion and the Junior business, I was given the appellation of my middle name. A German neighbor could not pronounce English very well and he called it Merdise and that was an excuse for Merdise--Hens Eyes from all my peers in school. When I entered high school, my father then being deceased, I became Harry and a new phase of my life began with that handicap eradicated.

MY EDUCATION

At 12 years of age I was ready for high school as in moving from one country school district to another I had represented myself as being ready for the 8th grade when I really only qualified for the seventh. This was because I wanted to be in the same grade with my brother Daryl and some other neighbor boys that I played with. The first 6½ years of my elementary school training were spent in a one room rural schoolhouse but the last half year there had been an improved consolidated two room school constructed.

It was a happy day when a first cousin of my mothers, Linda Ruckdashel (Besaw), from Birnamwood, Wisconsin offered to let me stay with her and her husband Garret and go to school there. The center of our high school district was 6 miles from our farm home and those were "horse and buggy" days. It would have been impossible for me to attend high school if I remained on the farm. Besides Dad Patient did not believe in education beyond an elementary level and any further education would be a wasteof time and mostly money. Work on the farm was more important.

Birnamwood was a small town of about 600 population and still remains about the same size. The distance from our farm home was only about 50 miles but that seemed like a long distance when I started high school. I began a new and happier existence during the next 4 years but the summers were dreadful again with all the field work previously mentioned. Garrett was a maintenance man for the high school at Birnamwood and I helped him after school and finished the first year with top academic achievement. The tragedy of the year, however, was that Linda died of cancer that spring.

Garrett took me into his home again the second year of high school even though he remarried and a woman with 2 small children and two grown (working) ones came to live with him also. Things went fine again the second year but the third year found Garrett and his family in California and me wondering just where I would go that third year. I was well enough acquainted in Birnamwood by this time that I found an elderly lady with an acre, or so of ground, 2 cows, some chickens and yard work to do in return for board and room. I will always remember Mrs. Brumm and her wonderful raspberry pie so thick with whipped cream. And somehow I got through that third year but fought with fists with most of my peers during the evening hours. I really struck out in resentment that year but my senior year found me lucky enough to find another elderly lady, in a wheel chair with an arthritic condition, whose husband had to be in the lumber camp all winter. So I milked for her and did the chores. There was buttermilk like you wouldn't believe there as I churned the milk into butter in their small churn. And so at 16, I graduated from high school as the valedictorian of my class.

There were a few other things during those four years that helped me through high school economically. They did much to make me self-reliant if they did not improve my vanity. One was working for the local bank. The bank had a room where the Board of Directors met and they used nice high brass topped spitoons. These had to be rinsed out and scrubbed regularly. Their furnace was fired by cord wood which came about 5 feet long and needed piling up and pushing into the basement through a chute. Then in the morning before employees arrived the furnace needed to be stoked with this cord wood to get it warm by the time they arrived. These logs were pretty heavy and made of maple. They provided good heat. They needed to be piled outside until ready to be pushed into the basement. I received $10.00 per month for this one year. I also piled up slab wood for which I got five cents per load which took about 15 minutes to pile up. You could make $1.00 in a five hour evening. (The man for whom I performed this work was an alcoholic who thus obtained time off the job to drink.) Other jobs were peddling Sunday papers. So I learned early what self-discipline and work were all about.

INTERLUDE

Then followed a three year period in my life in which I struggled hard to identify what I wanted to do, or where I could go with my life. I had neither the physique, nor inclination to engage in agricultural occupations. My high school had offered a business education program and I could type and do bookkeeping and felt I might be able to find an office job in the city. Again an angel, in the form of an old neighbor and friend of my mothers (Laura Pirner) came to my rescue. She and John had retired from the farm across from Hays' and moved to Milwaukee. She had a son my age and offered me a place to stay until I could procure employment. Her son Ted and I, who had been friends since small boys, roomed together and I found a clerical job of a blind alley nature. After three years of this and having a good time socially and economically, I began to realize I could not get very far without further education. I didn't know much about various occupations and didn't know what I would like for an occupation. After much thinking and another year of saving for that first year of college, as well as encouragement from my sister Fay, I enrolled in the State Teachers College at Oshkosh, Wisconsin and decided to be a high school history teacher. I had always loved school.

COLLEGE EDUCATION

This was 1929 and the nightmare of the next 4 years (which still occurs) was where I was going to get that room, board and tuition money. My savings ran out quite rapidly that first year and during the summer I found employment in a summer resort to get me started on the next year. During the fourth year of the interlude mentioned above, I had supplemented my office salary by going to work in the dining rooms of private clubs and learned about hotel occupations. This served me in good stead during the summers of the next four years as hotel jobs were relatively easy to find.

The second and third years I again found a friend in the form of a college advisor for the weekly newspaper. (Professor Fletcher.) Walter had me appointed business manager of their weekly paper, the main duty being to solicit ads for paying the cost of publication of the school paper. He arranged for me to get 60% of the profits and the editor to get forty per cent. This took care of my expenses in good shape and gave me some very good experience and public relations. I waited on table and washed dishes in one of the college dormitories and these two years found me adjusting and doing a good scholastic job.

The fourth year I felt I should not do quite as much work as I had practice teaching to do for my degree. A good friend was there again, in the form of President Polk, and he arranged a loan for me from the Masonic Educational Fund. Interest was at 6% and this began when you obtained your first employment. There were no scholarship funds, or governmental loans in that period. It was a happy day in early 1933 when I appeared for my baccalaureate degree and ranked in the upper 25% of my group. The problem was we were at the depth of the greatest economic depression this country has known to date.

EMPLOYMENT THE GREAT DEPRESSION 1933--

I was now qualified to teach history, social science and English at the high school level and met state standards for a temporary certificate. More than anything in the world I wanted to impress people with the importance of knowing something about the history of human beings and their relationships with each other. However, in 1933, Franklin Roosevelt had closed down all the banks temporarily and unemployment had reached alarming dimensions. People were not leaving their positions and the supply of new teachers far exceeded the openings available for them. Economic conditions were not to improve to any appreciable amount until after World War II--1941--1945. My resources financially were almost at zero--I followed up every lead I became aware of but to no avail. For over a year I pestered the U. S. Employment Service and othe employment agencies and performed temporary employment wherever I could, to exist. More than a year later I procured a position with the United States Forest Service as a clerk- typist and property auditor. This was the best I could do.

The position I held was in the purchasing department of the Regional Office of the U. S. Forest Service and we purchased all the property and materials for 9 states engaged in the Civilian Conservation Camp program. (C.C.C.) My responsibility was to keep a perpetual inventory record of purchases and disbursements and property of personnel. This was a stop-gap type of employment and at the end of two years it was running down. Meantime I had decided I wanted to be an attorney and enrolled in the University of Wisconsin Law School in 1936.

UNIVERSITY EDUCATION

Then followed 1½ years of averaging about 5 hours a night of sleep-- the hottest summer on record in Madison, before or since as an opener. On the verge of a nervous break-down and finding law was not what I had thought it was, I grabbed a teaching position in history which I had been able to discover through a roommate.

TEACHING

The teaching position was at Dorchester, Wisconsin, a small town in Clark County of about 300 people. I lasted one semester and I was ready to return to urban life. I taught 7 hours a day in two areas of history, some English and social science. There were duties as assistant principal, coaching a class play, supervising study period and playground, serving in a community carnival and living in a cold room with outdoor plumbing and preparing each evening for the next days performance. The salary was $90.00 per month and social life was very carefully supervised.

I went back to Milwaukee.

The depression seemed to be getting worse instead of better and employment conditions for teachers in the larger city were almost impossible. It meant substitute teaching until an opening came and then you were given preference. This substitute work was only a day a week, or maybe a day a month and I could not live on this. So back to the business world.

BUSINESS EMPLOYMENT

I found a bookkeeping position at $100.00 a month with possibilities of becoming the auditor in a national organization. A year went by and the company went bankrupt. After some public accounting temporary efforts, I finally found a permanent opening with the Wisconsin Electric Power Co. as a junior accountant. This was in the summer of 1938 and by the next year I had moved through the various departments of the institutiom and elevated to a senior status. This gave me a secure enough feeling so that on October 21, 1939 I entered into marriage. Another two years went by and we were in World War II. I was made an internal auditor, one of the first of its nature in the nation and became a key employee of this company for the duration of the war.

MORE TEACHING AND EDUCATION

Teaching was in my blood and after the war my thoughts again turned in that direction. I had been teaching accounting in a private business school during the latter part of the war during evenings to supplement my income. The president of that school,(Spencerian College) Miss Bennett, was continually urging me to give up my position and come to teach permanently for her. She wanted to know how much I would want so I added about $100.00 a month on to my salary, thinking to scare her out, and I moved into a new position.

Giving up a position which I had held for 6½ years to something less secure was difficult but the next 8 years (1945--1953) proved to be the happiest of my life. Spencerian College, after World War II, embarked on a full two year program in business and sales administration leading to a bachelor's degree. This was a program approved by the G. I. Bill of Rights. I prepared a curriculum for the school, taught several of the courses, particularly in the accounting area, and served as dean of men. This went on for four years and the G. I. program had about terminated as far as enrollments were concerned. The school elevated me to Dean and a program was initiated which involved mostly non-G. I. students. In the meantime I had worked for 2 years on a Master of Education degree program at Marquette University and completed my degree. This had included several courses in visual education which was just beginning to come into vogue. After a civil service examination, I was offered a one year appointment as a visual aid officer in the army with a colonels' rating. This was one of the toughest offers I ever had to turn down.

TEACHING AND EDUCATIONAL ADMINISTRATION-CONTINUED LINCOLN HIGH SCHOOL

CARROLL COLLEGE

By 1953 Spencerian College had moved into a new building and the college had received wide acceptance in the community. Public technical schools were beginning to develop similar programs, however, and salaries had to be kept at a low level to keep tuition rates at a competitive level. The public schools were paying much higher salaries and an offer came to serve as a teacher and guidance officer at Lincoln High School in Milwaukee. Four years (1953--1957) were spent at this truly democratic school. There were about 50% black and about 20 different ethnical backgrounds including Italian, Puertorican, Spanish, Irish, German and just about every nationality of person. It was a five year high school, from 7th through 12th grades. At the end of four years my blood count was getting so low that I felt a change was needed. I found it at Carroll College, a Presbyterian church related school, at Waukesha, Wisconsin.

My position was similar to that at Spencerian College. I headed up the Business Administration Department of this college of about 1000 students. It involved planning the curriculum, scheduling and teaching accounting, marketing and business law.

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-EAU CLAIRE

This position occupied my attention for three years (1957-1960 when an opening of a similar nature came at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire. The State Teachers Colleges had moved from teachers' colleges to liberal arts colleges by the time I was offered the position to head up their Business Administration Department. They were were moving toward university status during the three years in which I served and reorganization required a Doctor of Philosophy for my position. So I moved from college teaching as an assistant professor to the growing technical institutions of the state.

WESTERN WISCONSIN TECHNICAL INSTITUTE--LA CROSSE, WISCONSIN

At this time, (1963) vocational schools were just beginning to develop into technical schools with two year associate degree programs. This seemed to offer the best opportunities for people with masters' degrees, for most of their instructors at this time held only the baccalaureate degrees. There was only one other, as I recall, when I accepted the position of Business Education Coordinator at the La Crosse

Vocational, Technical and Adult Schools. State law now required that if such schools were to offer associate degree programs, every department must be headed up by someone with a master's degree. One of my proudest achievements has been to have been the leader and subsequent department head of the first associate degree program to be offered at the La Crosse vocational school. This led to a mad scramble for other departments to shape up. This first business department program was in accounting and it was followed by data processing, administrative secretarial, legal secretarial and medical secretarial programs all approved at the state level. The La Crosse Vocational School became the Western Wisconsin Technical Institute and became the district center for 9 counties in the mid-western part of the state.

SUPERVISION AND RESEARCH

As the technical departments expanded, department heads became division chairmen and I advanced. The division chairmen were area supervisors and after 8 years in the business division, it was found necessary to have a supervisor of instructional research which covered all of the technical programs of the institution. This, then became my position until I retired. (1971--1974.) Mandatory retirement at that time was 65 years of age.

MARRIAGE Doris Henrietta Rathert

It should be understandable, in the light of the above, something of the difficulty of entertaining thoughts of marriage at an early age. The strong individual pride of accomplishment and self-reliance which I had developed would not allow me to depend on help from someone of the opposite sex as we find so prevalent today. My social adjustment had been pretty sorely neglected and had much to be desired but needless to say, I would have liked to have married sooner than I did. Fate, again, was to find for me, at the right time, my companion for the rest of my life. And some of the finest in-laws it has been mans' privilege to encounter.

Our marriage has been childless, why it would be hard to understand. Our nieces and nephews and now our grand-nieces and nephews have become endeared to us, however, and they, in addition to my many counselees in school, have filled the gap for us. They now number over thirty and we celebrated 40 years of married life recently with all but two of them present in a party given by them.

Doris was the youngest of two children born to Henry Rathert and Dora Siegrist, children, respectively, of German and Swiss immigrants to this country. Her father followed in his fathers' footsteps and became a successful farmer, migrating to Milwaukee after Doris's graduation from high school. Here Doris nurtured them during their retirement years and assisted them in caring for her nephew, the only son of her brother who had become divorced from his wife and was unable to care for the son himself. Her father left us in 1947 and she became the main solace of her mother until she joined Dad Rathert in 1955.

Doris had worked as a bank bookkeeper after graduating from high school and was employed at this occupation for some years until our marriage. She became full time homemaker when we married because of bank policy at that time of not employing married women. With the exception of serving as a bank teller during the war years to assist in the manpower shortage, she has been the homemaker. The bank experience served her well in managing the meager budget of a struggling school teacher and planning all the entertainment and hospitality necessary for a husband with a large family and dedicated to a life of educational service.

We were married in the Reformed Church in which Doris had been confirmed and which later merged with the Congregational Church to form the United Church of Christ. We have served there together for over 40 years in four different congregations and our relationships have been beautiful. These years have made up for the long period in which I could not entertain any church affiliation. We hold fast to that wonderful union of 1939.

THOSE RETIREMENT YEARS 1974--

Retirement came in 1974 and these have been wonderful years. Administrative law in that year required mandatory retirement at age 65--but until 70 years of age I still taught classes at the local University and Technical Institute on a part-time basis. There have been many social and volunteer activities. Square and round dancing has been our main social activity--in Wisconsin, California and Texas. The first two years I managed to complete a genealogy on the Hutchison side of my family. There have been many committee activities in the American Association of Retired People and the National Retired Teachers Association. The one I am the most proud of is my service as educational chairman for the Tax-Aide program for the elderly on which I have served the past three years and want to continue. The other achievement was the establishment of a local chapter of SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives) of which I was the first chairman and recruited most of the counselors. This has become a permanent local organization backed by our local Chamber of Commerce and maintaining an office there with approval of the Small Business Administration. We have tried to get 2 months in a warmer climate but it has been difficult to leave our many activities behind for this vacation.

Genealogy is now my main passion and I am deep in research of Poole and Besaw, my mothers parents. There is still the Johnston clan on my fathers' side.

THE REST OF MY FAMILY

Lest the wrong impression be obtained from my necessarily limited consideration of each family in the broad scope of this family history, I want to relate briefly on the rest of my family.

Basically, in our family, step-relationship was a word emphasized more by others than ourselves. My step-brothers and sisters have always meant as much to me as my real brothers and sisters. I am sure they feel the same about me and I know their children think as much of me as an uncle as do my real nieces and nephews. Why wouldn't they? We all grew up together, lived together, played and worked together as one family. I can't remember much about my real father and Myrla can probably remember nothing. And the same, I am sure applies to my step-brothers and sisters in regard to their mother. My two older sisters were married young and left home before I got to know them so I am sure they were not closer to me than my new sisters and brothers. As we grew older, we realized how petty some of our differences had been and that such differences were much worse in some families and even in small families with many more advantages, socially, economically and culturally. I have outlined my long struggle with Dad Patient but I remember how proud I was when he introduced me to someone as "my son". And I think he was proud of me.

Even with all our poverty and lack of opportunities created by our environment, we have prospered. Fay's husband continued on the farm until his death but she then found it necessary to dispose of the farm, whose buildings and machinery had deteriorated to a very low level as well as the sale value of farms. He had obtained all of his land (large acreage as farms were at that time) free of debt as an inheritance, yet he was losing money regularly.

Mona's husband found it more profitable to retrain for a factory occupation after his family left home. He spent many years, starting with the war years, in the Clintonville 4-wheel drive factory and retired with a pension from there.

Daryl went to work as a farm hand as soon as he finished grade school but gravitated to the city as the driver of a delivery truck at Service Bakery in Appleton, Wisconsin. He followed this with factory work, a restaurant of his own and service in the army during World War II as a Mess Sergeant, or cook in the field service. After being discharged, he became an interior decorator until the time of his accidental death at an early age.

Eva married young and because of unemployment on the part of her husband had to come home for the birth of her baby girl. She died from infection following this birth.

Ronald lost his life very young in a gun accident at a neighboring farm.

Mary married at a very early age also but her husband managed to find factory employment and other part time work to support her and a family of three children until they were self-sufficient. He died at an early age of a rare form of paralysis. Mary has maintained a home through all of this and her children have all been successful. She is very proud of her family and their educational achievements and happy they could have a better environment than it was possible for her to have. Her youngest daughter became a doctor of medicine and radiology specialist which is indeed an achievement to be proud of.

Myrla married early, too, and had a large family for those of her era. Her husband was a farmer, a tavern keeper and finally, a successful building contractor before he suffered a heart attack. She has carried on well and is very happily married to a second husband and manages a tavern with her husband, who also has a industrial management position. Her family are all away from home and managing well.

Leslie has done well in spite of all his disadvantages. He started by being a truck driver, was called into the service of his country in December of 1942 and served in the Anti-Aircraft until early 1946. When he returned, he obtained employment with a large Trucking Firm and was recently retired after many years of jobs well done. Appleton is his home. He has two grown boys and a wife who still is employed.

Vadyn was adopted by a first cousin of my mothers but found it hard to adjust in that new home. She also married very young but her husband came from a family in good economic circumstances and was made a partner in a brewery industry. They had two children, a boy and a girl, both of whom have had an excellent educational background. Vadyn left us very young as a result of a heart condition.

This word picture of my family group has been an attempt to look back at this stage of my life and paint a true picture of how it was and is. Needless to say, as one studies the position of someone else at a mature age, and looking back, it is with a lot more understanding than at the time of its occurence. Ours has been a beautiful family experience in spite of all our differences and the hard struggles we all had in the wild generation we grew up in.

Military Note:

Deschler Reed, son of Angelina Adaresta Poole, (XI A 3) served in World War I. My first cousin, once removed.

Two of my brothers served in World War II.

Daryl Hutchison: Mess Sergeant in the Armored Division and stationed at Fort Knox, Kentucky for most of the conflict. (XI F 4)

Leslie Patient: Inducted Dec. 15, 1942 at Camp Stewart, Georgia. Went overseas to the South Pacific in July 1943. He served with the 472nd Anti Aircraft Battalion, Company B for the duration of his service. Two years of this service was spent in New Guinea in the towns of Lae and Finchhaven. Also one year at Clark Field in the Phillipines. Discharged February 15, 1946 at Camp McCoy, Wisconsin. (XI F-1 4)

Two of my nephews also served in World War II and are discussed with that generation.

EDWIN ALLAN POOLE

1903--1975

(Adapted from information furnished by his widow, Gladys Thomte Poole, 1981.)

MY FIRST COUSIN

Edwin Allan Poole was a man of the time and the place which produced him. He was an example of the American Ideal. He believed in that ideal and was living proof of its validity. Edwin was the product of a Canadian born mother and an American born father. He grew up in the great middle west and learned from these midwesterners, and his parents, a love of this country and a respect for its history. The man acquired a fierce independence, a belief in his abilities, and a desire to get ahead.

He was born April 1, 1903 at Kaukauna, Wisconsin. His elementary and high school education were obtained in various mid-western towns as his parents moved to various locations. The details of their movements are described in an account of his father, Edwin Franklin Poole, previously related. He was able to graduate from high school at 16 years of age--two years ahead of regular schedule. His mother painted and sold china to supplement the father's meagre income in order to provide Edwin with the best education possible. She saw that he had private music lessons and made him practice one hour daily on the piano. Edwin grumbled and would rather have been outside playing but his mother insisted he remain on the piano stool and practice, which he did grudgingly at first, later he became interested as he had to sit there anyway. He was an expert in music by the time he had completed high school and thanked his mother many times. It helped him immeasurably as he worked his way through college playing in various orchestras in his spare and vacation time.

Edwin's parents resided in Appleton, Wisconsin at the time he entered college. Just how he received his inspiration to attend college, probably the first of his long line of Poole ancestors, it is hard to say. It is my firm belief, however, that his mother inspired him a lot--early in life. His father certainly favored any education, as had his father. He was fortunate that Appleton was the location of Lawrence College which was on the way to being one of the finest liberal arts colleges in the United States, and especially in the fine arts. It served him well and in 1924 he received his Bachelor of Arts degree, with a major in History, from that institution.

Upon graduation, he accepted a position as Principal of a high school in Hettinger, North Dakota. He served in this capacity for four years, and in the meantime, he had met a lovely young lady named Gladys Thomte. Gladys was a graduate of Carleton College at Northfield, Minnesota, another highly rated liberal arts college. She had earned her Bachelor of Arts degree in Mathematics and Science from this institution. Lisbon, North Dakota, had been her home until 1927, where her father and his brother owned a men's clothing store and he served as a tailor. She married Edwin in 1927 and my cousin now had a new inspiration to carry him forward.

Early in 1928 he launched on a new career by convincing the School Board of McLaughlin, South Dakota, that at 25 years of age, he was capable of serving as superintendent of that large district. He introduced several innovations in this district to prove his ability. One of his outstanding achievements was the establishment of a dormitory in an old school building so that youngsters who lived in the country could attend classes during the harsh Dakota winters, when travel was almost impossible. Edwin was now ready for having a family of his own and in July of 1929, his first and only child, Carmen, was born.

This gave Edwin new impetus to accomplish great things for the Poole lineage. He attended Summer School at the University of Wisconsin to obtain graduate credits in educational administration for his position and he now continued this at the University of Minnesota during the summers. He attended the University of Minnesota for three summers and had completed all the academic requirements for a Master's degree in Educational Administration when adversity made it necessary for him to change his plans. I read recently that, "Life is what happens to us while we are making other plans."

Carmen was not a robust child and developed an asthmatic condition, which was probably brought on by the climate, but if not, certainly aggravated by it. The year 1929 marked the beginning of the worst economic depression the country had ever experienced and became known as the Great Depression. In addition, a severe drought took place throughout the central part of the United States, including the Dakotas, which caused the area to be called the "Dust Bowl". The economic depression kept getting worse, instead of better, and the dust from the drought was extremely aggravating to Carmen's condition, to the point where Edwin and Gladys felt they needed a different environment for her. It was not just a question of Carmen's health, although this certainly was the most important reason, but economically the Dakotas were bankrupt, as were many other areas of this great country.

After eight successful years in performing his Superintendents' duties, Edwin gave up his position and moved to Spokane, Washington and began a new career as a salesman. This was in 1936 and by 1937 the family had adjusted themselves to Spokane and Edwin had obtained employment with the Prudential Insurance Co. of America as an insurance salesman. He advanced rapidly and was a part of their staff management where he spent over 30 years until his retirement in 1968. He did not feel the necessity for completing his thesis for a Master's degree in Educational Administration at the University of Minnesota but rather embarked on a four year educational program with the American College of Life Underwriters to obtain a coveted C. L. U., or Certified Life Underwriter degree. This he obtained in 1952 and served him in good stead to advance to the top of his profession.

Edwin's love of music prompted him to study and to play piano and banjo in dance bands from 1922 to 1942. While music was not his primary career, he was a professional, and this "sideline" led to some adventurous episodes dodging gangsters during the speakeasy days of Prohibition. It wasn't all college balls and grange dances in those days. The "arts tugged at him during his entire lifetime. As a teenager he travelled with a midwest Chautaqua troupe as it took culture and entertainment to the people. As a high school teacher he directed and toured a production of "Cappy Ricks." He had authored a large body of material in several fields. He wrote and produced films for a movie club in Spokane. He wrote and filmed slide shows which traveled both United States and international circuits. He made tapes which acquainted foreigners with United States music, history and western events of interest. He wrote an autobiography of his life and times in this country he admired. Perhaps the largest share of his writing is concerned with United States history and was published in the Pacific Northwesterner, the journal of another organization to which he belonged. His daughters' success in acting, directing and writing has obviously been the result of inherited ability and encouragement from him.

History was not memorization of dates and wars to Edwin, but a study of people, their dreams and their aspirations. While living on the Standing Rock Reservation, he became acquainted with, and learned to admire, the American Indian. He listened to many tales, and in time, researched and wrote of historical events with the perspective of one who knew and understood more than one "side" of the story. With the eye of the historian, he turned his research toward genealogy to learn about the families which preceded him. This study led to a tape and slide production about our ancestors who struggled against unbelievable odds to cross an ocean in the Mayflower and fight for a new life in a new country. He felt a kinship with all those who preceded him and left a legacy of knowledge, art and love for those of us who follow.

Edwin died in October 1975. Many still remember the man, but 100 years hence people will still learn from and enjoy the work he left behind. He had that independent Poole spirit but he also inherited his mother's gentleness of nature and patience that kept him in control of his environment when other Poole ancestry would have lost control.

A PROLOGUE

The following is a reproduction of a prologue to Edwin's autobiography which he terms, "In One Man's Lifetime". It was written by Edwin in 1973 and graphically portrays some of the problems and solutions that occured in our world during the period of our Pooles 11th generation sojourn in America.

"I suppose that each generation feels that during its time has been made the greatest progress in the history of the world. And in some cases this assumption is a true one for the progress of man through history has not been a smooth, steady climb to more knowledge and to a high standard of living. Much progress was made during some lifetimes and at other times centuries have gone by with little or no progress being made at all.

It has been often said that Caesar could get around the Roman Empire faster and easier than George Washington could get around his infant republic--and truthfully at that. There was no faster methods of transport on land from the beginning of the Christian Era until in the 1830's or 1840's. The Caesars had direct, well made roads to travel while our founding fathers wound their way through forests and over and through winding and treacherous streams.

True the period around the year 1500 was a time in which progress was made. For in about 50 years the unknown half of the world was explored. Then followed a lull of about 300 years. But in the 19th century progress came in a surge.

Steam had been put to use in the first half of the century and the factory system had been installed. Primitive trains were in operation in the 1830's and 1840's but the era of extensive train travel was not to come for another 50 years. Steam did not replace sailing vessels until the last quarter of the 19th century. But progress was being made and the 19th century was beginning to look like modern times.

The first photographs appeared in the 1840's and shortly after that came postage stamps. Surgical operations became possible after 1846 due to the discovery of anesthetics by the dentist Dr. William Norton. The era of motion pictures was starting in the 1890's and the use of sail had given away to steam late in the century. Still in 1898 when Admiral Dewey stormed into Manila Bay to defeat the Spanish fleet, his flagship, the Olympia, in addition to its steam boilers also had sailing masts. So did the Maine which was sunk in Havana Harbor. Only the Oregon, well known for its hurried trip around South America, was entirely dependent on steam for propulsion. All of this merely reminds me that I was born half way between the inauguration of President Andrew Jackson and the Arab fuel crisis.

While my life started shortly after the turn of the century it is surprising to find that electric lights, inside toilets, the phonograph, and motion pictures were relatively new at the time. Radio was not to appear for another 20 years and roads were for horses. America was not to take to automobile wheels for another 10 or 15 years. The Wright Brothers first flew in 1903 and the Ford Motor Company and I started out in life the same year--1903.

Actually few people at the time attached much importance to the experiments of the Wrights. When they finally flew in December of 1903 only the VIRGINIAN PILOT of Norfolk, Virginia gave them much mention. Their home town Dayton paper didn't even report the event and the influential NEW YORK TRIBUNE, not knowing where to put the item resolved the matter by putting it on the sports page. A year earlier the new Victor Talking Machine Company shifted from cylinder records to discs and in 1908 Columbia finally got around to putting music on both sides of its records. Movies were in their infancy. While the first story film, THE GREAT TRAIN ROBBERY, was three years in the future, there had been produced a film with a plot, and it attracted great public interest. It was A LIFE OF AN AMERICAN FIREMAN and was the forerunner of the story films that followed. Movies at this time were shown after the vaudeville and were in a class with the ever present dog act.

The primitive automobile was struggling alone but in 1903 it made the headlines of the United States newspapers with a sensational cross-country trip from San Francisco to New York in 52 days. It was made by a Packard "Pacific" and was a startling event. If we were to put one of our 1973 cars on what passed for roads in those days it is probable it would have taken much longer to make the trip--if the 1973 car could have made it at all. It was also in 1903 that Missouri, foreseeing traffic hazards and excessive auto speed, passed the first speed law. It set what seemed like a sensible top speed for automobiles at 9 miles an hour.

Syncopation had come to popular music in the 1890's and the stately music of Stephen Foster had given away to the new negro-oriented ragtime. If sentiment had not been wrung out of the new music it at least had acquired the catch bounce of the music, later to be called Jazz or Dixieland, that came out of the saloons and "sporting houses" of the time.

The year 1903 saw the appearance of the still popular IDA and the ever popular barbershop tune SWEET ADELINE. Edgar Edgar wrote his POMP AND CIRCUMSTANCE and the WIZARD OF THE NILE was set to music in a show from which came the still used expression, "He's a Wiz." Victor Herbert was just making an impression on the musical public and it was in 1903 that his BABES IN TOYLAND appeared. A little later on he wrote the RED MILL and NAUGHTY MARIETTA.

But songs were not the instant hits in those days and the songs the public was singing were of an earlier year. In 1902 RAG TIME COWBOY JOE, BILL BAILEY, and THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME were written and probably the tunes on everybody's lips in 1903.

The next year (1904) crowds flocked to the World Fair in St. Louis and were thrilled to see two new inventions--the electric hearing aid and the new vacuum cleaner.

So it appears a new era was starting and from these primitive beginnings my life time has witnessed world flights, television, unbelievable progress in electronics, the atomic bomb, and trips to the moon. As it is impossible to list them all let's just remind the generation that follows ours that much of what they take for granted were things that did not exist when I was born."

TWELFTH GENERATION

There are no direct descendants in my line, as I have had no children, but my sisters and brother were blessed as detailed in the following family group charts. The scope of this book has not permitted detailed sketching of all the ancestors and descendants so we have chosen one from each generation in which to detail some heritage and discuss some historical background which applies to all of that generation. The same is true of photographs. Many were impossible to procure, or were not satisfactory for reproduction so an apology is extended at this point.

Edwin has had one descendant in his line and she is detailed in this chapter. Her daughter and son are the most recent generation and are also discussed briefly.

The third direct line which is considered in this family history and genealogy is that of Allie Mae Poole and her lineage is reviewed by Betty Schnick in the Supplement attached.

NIECES, NEPHEWS AND FIRST COUSINS

My nieces and nephews are considered in the family groups and more than one has extended the lineage to the 14th generation of the Pooles but I will consider only one in my direct lineage--Myrlon Harry Stroessenreuther, for a direct sketch. More detailed information may be obtained on these by consulting my first attempt at genealogy, "The Hutchisons of Maple Creek".

As this production is limited to only two of Willie Vince's children, Cecil's children will not be given consideration in the next two generations. It is with a great deal of pride that I have surveyed the accomplishments of all these family groups and we love them for their pioneering efforts in this generation and for their contributions to this great democratic society of America the Beautiful.

MYRLON HARRY STROESSENREUTHER 12 F 4

MY NEPHEW

Myrlon was the fourth of five children born to Fay Hutchison, my sister, and the oldest in my family. He is the 12th direct descendant of our John Pool of Reading, Massachusetts. His father John, was the son of an immigrant farmer from Germany and inherited the Stroessenreuther home farm from his father, George. "Jack", as we always knew him, was very similar in behavior and activity to our Poole ancestors although his farming equipment and operations may have been improved. He loved to hunt and fish, the farm was his home, and like the other pioneers of his day, he wanted the best for the next generation. His four sons all completed high school and one went on to to obtain a university education as well. None of them were interested in remaining on the old homestead and carrying on there. Fay was left, eventually, with the full responsibility of carrying on the farm operation and disposing of the property after Jack's death. This she did quit ably.

This era was discussed in detail in our consideration of Edwin Allan Poole of the last generation and the Stroessenreuthers were a typical product of this era. Leo worked for awhile with his father but was not physically up to the hard labor, trained for an occupation in the field of optometry as a lens grinder and found employment with a large optical firm from which he is now retired. George, after serving as a personal body guard to President Roosevelt during World War II, obtained employment with the Government as a postal employee and recently retired from this position. Neil after two naval enlistments and service in the Korean War, completed college at the University of Wisconsin with major work in Agriculture and a Masters' Degree from the University of Michigan. He is an outstanding soil scientist in that state. Myrlon, alone, remains in the old environment, in the same township of Lebanon, where he was born, and with responsibility for approximately 200 acres of land.

Myrlon did not exactly choose to carry on as a farmer. It happened that an old neighbor of his fathers, who held a 120 acre farm across the road from his father, had retired and was renting his farm while he resided in the city of Milwaukee and worked there. They were anxious to dispose of the farm property as their children held no interest in it and the parents were too old to carry on much longer. A very reasonable offer of sale was made to Myrlon, almost a sacrifice, as they had plenty of other resources and had a fond affection for their old neighbors. As this was the era of the Great Depression, unskilled jobs were very scarce. Myrlon had no specialized training, was married and working with his father on the farm so this seemed like a real opportunity to combine operations between the two farms and keep original settlers in ownership. Then, too, the old homestead was hardly adequate to support two families with the low farm income then existing. Myrlon purchased the farm and must have been a great comfort to his father during the last years of Jack's life. Jack and he loved the same things--to hunt and fish.

This nephew of mine is not a dairy farmer, however, like his father and neighbors had been. He has not maintained the buildings in operable condition for a dairying operation but rather, has leased out the land for cultivation by others and been employed for many years by a Road Construction Company as a machine operator. Every Spring, as soon as conditions are favorable, he mounts a big road machine and helps construct new, or reconstruct old highways throughout the state. He is holding on to the old and adding the new. He has been a pioneer to create new facilities for the transportation of modern vehicles throughout this great state of Wisconsin. The deer are plentiful on parts of his acreage and he leads a pioneer life with modern comforts. Myrlon is probably more affluent than anyone in our family but he is not affected by it and loves the old ways of life. He can still assert the independence of his great-grandfather and is not subject to all the frustrations of city life as it is generally experienced.

Neither is Myrlon worried about retirement. He owns the land he lives on and it will never be difficult to maintain a livelihood there. He has had three children but they are not interested in farming either. A son resides in a mobile home on land acquired from his father and adjacent to the old homestead but he too would rather work at construction work on the highway, or at other less confining occupations of an unskilled nature, than at farming. The Poole tradition of independence carries on!

OTHER NEPHEWS AND NIECES

Mona's offspring present much the same picture as far as pioneering is concerned. Her three daughters migrated to California and one is a real estate broker in Burbank, one a partner in a photographic studio in the same area and the third has retired with her husband to the state of Missouri after many years managing motels and apartment buildings in California. Her oldest son is a retired Diesel auto mechanic and former World War II veteran. Her youngest son was an office manager for the Clintonville

Four Wheel Drive Co. and retired early with a heart condition.

Daryl's son, a Korean War paratrooper, has served in a Paper Company factory as an industrial worker for many years as well as moonlighting at a maintenance job to raise a family of six boys. His daughter married an industrial worker (set-up man) who retired at an early age due to a back injury to Tampa, Florida. Here he was able to carry on at a welding job in a construction company.

Myrla's oldest daughter married a building contractor who has built several homes and engaged in the construction trade in the Columbus, Wisconsin area. Marlyn works as a roofing and building contractor as did his deceased brother, Richard. One son is a barber and also works at the welding trade. Another, Ronald, manages a Cenex Farmers Cooperative Store as well as having been a salesman for them for a period of years. Her youngest daughter married a successful farm dairying service employee and works herself in a supervisory position for a manufacturing company.

Eva's daughter married a taxi driver, who, upon her tragic death in an automobile accident migrated to Detroit, Michigan and has not kept contact with the family.

Mary's three children have adjusted well to our new technical era. Melvin has achieved a successful military career both in the Navy and the Army over a period of 27 years and works in a civilian capacity for the U. S. military service after retirement from the regular army in the area of communications. Patricia worked for a period as a medical technician after graduating from the University of Wisconsin but took graduate work in the Medical School and became an M. D. with specialization in radiology. She now teaches radiology in the University at Syracuse, New York.
Lee has become an office administrator with the Bergstrom Paper Company at Neenah, Wisconsin. He, too, like his brother Melvin spent many years in the U. S. Army as an active and reserve recruit. He retired after more than 24 years of such activity with the rank of Sergeant Major E-9.

Leslie's son John (named after his father) has made a fine adjustment and has learned a technical occupation.

Vaydyn's son Don served with the army for two years following two years of specialized education in business administration and marketing. He has carried on a successful career in sales and marketing for one of the Wisconsin paper companies. Her daughter Marlene has held a position as a teacher in the San Bernardino public school system in California for many years.

Truly a beautiful cross section of our modern technical society.

Our summary should not forget the two unfortunate individuals, who through some circumstances of unknown origin have not been able to cope in a normal fashion with their environment. Fay's one daughter Estella was born with a mentality which prevented her rising above a certain intelligence level. Leslie's Paul also was saddled with a handicap which is not understandable. Society has come to accept the handicapped and these two individuals are deviations from the norm which has happened in every rank of our social order. Perhaps some day we will know better how to cope with these mental problems. They have been cared for with all the love that could be given and what was thought best for them in the light of circumstances.

CARMEN KATHLEEN POOLE

MY FIRST COUSIN--ONCE REMOVED

Carmen Kathleen, daughter of Edwin Allan Poole, was born with the Great Depression and grew up with World War II and the Korean Conflict. She became the second generation of Poole college graduates. She saw the world change during the Vietnam era and heard this country's economic and social policies debated from coast to coast. A small piece of the world fell on her and her family when Mount St. Helens blew its top, changing the landscape as well as the people' lives. Though all of these events undoubtedly played a role in shaping her life, she doesn't mark her years by national, or world disasters.

She was born in Fargo, North Dakota and remembers McLauglin, South Dakota, where she spent the first seven years of her life. She began school in the district on a Sioux Reservation where her father was superintendent of schools. Moving across the Rocky Mountains from a little prairie town to a city in Eastern Washington was an exciting experience and Spokane has been the family home since 1936. She was graduated from Whitworth College, Spokane, Washington, with a Bachelor of Arts degree in English and Drama and in 1953, married Robert Farley, from Cando, North Dakota, who had immigrated to Washington in 1942. Robert was born in Cando and lived there until 1942 after which he was educated in Spokane and attended Whitworth College at the same time as Carmen. Two children were a result of this marriage, Jon Robert, born in 1955 and Jan Kathleen born in 1959.

Robert is a high school teacher and principal and Carmen is a social worker for the State of Washington. Together they devote countless hours to community and children's theatre and this activity has been a family affair. Edwin Poole's interest and talent in the arts was inherited by his daughter and grandchildren. Carmen and Jon are co-authors of four produced children's plays. Carmen directs, Jon designs scenery and technical effects and Jan handles the lighting and public relations. Robert plays a clown for children and handles the financial aspects of their productions.

At the time of this writing, 1981, Robert and Carmen are directors of a theatre school for children ages six to 18 in the Spokane Civic Theatre.

Carmen marks the years of her life to date by the good time and the exciting times spent with her family doing the things they all enjoy most.

(Composed and contributed by Edwin's widow, Gladys Thomte Poole, 1981)

THIRTEENTH GENERATION

The genealogy and family history pertaining to the 13th generation of the John Pool descendants in America centers around my grandnephew Richard Lee Stroessenreuther and my 1st cousins, twice removed, Jon and Jan Farley, the grandchildren of Edwin Allan Poole. There are recorded in the family groups, 60 other grandnephews and grandnieces which with the latter two should constitute a good cross section of life in this generation.

At least 9 of these grandnephews and grandnieces have offspring making up a 14th generation in which Richard Daniel Stroessenreuther, now close to 14 years of age, follows the Stroessenreuther line. The Farley's are near 27 and 23, respectively, so there may soon be additional lineage there. At present, they are busy launching their careers and studying graduate school material. Which sums up to the fact that the Estella and Edwin Franklin Poole lineage are still on the move and contributing each in his own measure to our great American society. They will be considered more in detail in the ensuing brief summaries.

The 13th generation has experienced the challenge of the era described by Edwin Allan Poole and have had to train and retrain for numerous new occupations which have developed in the period during and following World War II. We have experienced gigantic strides in mechanical, electronic and computer technology which have changed our lives immeasurably. It has been a new technical era in which thousands of new jobs have been established and thousands have become obsolete. The computer has moved into the business world and made it possible to handle business transactions with tremendous speed, eliminating old manual and hand methods with machine accuracy. Employees must have more than the old educational background to find employment. Thousands of jobs are going begging because of lack of technically trained personnel while unemployment is rife. The 14th generation must be more skilled.

We are well into the atomic era which involves nuclear energy for all types of activity. The computer is moving into every home in the nation to make life easier and to perform tasks with more accuracy and efficiency. Will the 14th generation of Pooles be equipped to meet the new technical requirement needed to survive and are they facing a nuclear holocaust that is posed today. The heritage is there. We are sure the abilities will develop what is needed for these new generations. The 14th generation of Pooles are still very young but they are being made very much aware of the future. Our public relations and communications personnel are creating an international awareness of current and future problems that should make everyone aware of the pitfalls to survival.

RICHARD LEE STROESSENREUTHER

MY GRANDNEPHEW

Richard Lee Stroessenreuther, the second oldest of Myrlon Stroessenreuther's offspring, seems to have inherited many of his father's attributes and remains closely associated with him. He works for the same highway Construction Company, goes hunting and fishing with him and lives in a mobile home established on farm property purchased from his father and neighboring his father's home.

Richard, or Dick, as we think of him, had left school behind him before he was 19 years of age, had entered the field of employment, married and the father of Richard Daniel, our next generation of Pooles. The new technical world which Dick entered was not too sympathetic for anyone without some specialized, or technical, knowledge. There must have followed a very difficult period for my grandnephew and his young bride. They must have encountered many disappointing years and found it hard to be independent and make it on their own. After working at several temporary types of employment of an unskilled nature and encountering unemployment at frequent intervals, he finally found a more permanent type of employment.

It was a little over 9 years from the arrival of Dick's first offspring until Daniel John came along. He was almost 28 then and steadily employed and seasoned in an occupation with a highway Construction Company. Now he is in his early 30's and likes his country life. He has established a life style which is strikingly like that of his father and he, no doubt, will take over on his father's farm when father is no longer here and be of great solace to Myrlon, as Myrlon must have been to his father. The independent Poole spirit carries on here and room for individualism and freedom are his.

JON ROBERT FARLEY 1955-- JAN KATHLEEN FARLEY 1959--

(Edwin A. Pooles Grandchildren)

MY FIRST COUSINS--TWICE REMOVED

The 1960's and 1970's were an era of discontent manifested by an unsettled world with changing values. Jon Robert and Jan Kathleen Farley had the advantage of strong ties with the past and gained a perspective denied to many young people of the time because of their closeness to their grandfather Edwin Poole. Their family was close and spemt many hours together producing plays for Spokane Civic and Spokane Children's Theatres.

Jon, born in Tonasket, Washington, on May 21, 1955, grew up in Spokane. He became the third generation of this Poole line to graduate from college. His college career was at Whitworth College and Eastern Washington University from which he graduated with a major in Theatre Arts. He spent most of his childhood back stage, developing in the process an expertise in the technical aspects of designing, building and lighting theatrical productions. After three years as a lighting technician for the Oregon Shakespearean Festival, he was accepted into the graduate program in Technical Design and Production of the Yale School of Drama. With his mother, Carmen, he has co-authored four produced children's plays.

His sister, Jan, was born in Spokane, Washington, on April 14, 1959. She attended Lewis and Clark College in Portland, Oregon and was graduated from Central Washington University in 1981 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Theatre Management and Public Relations. She too, followed the family's interest in theatre and became an expert lighting technician. However, her primary focus is on publicity, public relations and financial management of theatres. She has worked for the Portland Civic Theatre, the Lake Chelan Summer Theatre and the Capitol Theatre in Yakima, Washington.

Grandfather Edwin Poole travelled with the Chautauqua in his youth and two generations later his grandchildren continue in his footsteps.

(Composed and contributed by Grandmother Gladys Thomte Poole, 1981)

OTHER GRANDNEPHEWS AND GRANDNIECES

The 60 other grandnephews and grandnieces shown in the attached family groups are quite well adjusted to the current technical era. A few are still in school. Some have a university degree and are following professional occupations and all have obtained, or are obtaining a high school education. As stated in the general consideration of this generation, there are many more jobs for skilled, or technically prepared individuals, than for unskilled persons. The Western Wisconsin Technical Institute (formerly vocational school) of this city lists over 60 vocational and technical programs in their most recent catalog and this is generally true in other district technical schools throughout the state. As this is supplemented by a night school progam encompassing similar program and all at a nominal cost, there should be little excuse for individuals not being prepared for employment. We find these 13th generation individuals engaged in at least a dozen occupations of varying degrees of education and skills necessary.

Leo had two sons. One is a civil service employee for the city of Wausau and the other an employee of a Computer Systems Company in the sales field.

George's son is a C. P. A. (Certified Public Accountant), a university graduate and employed by a large industrial firm. One daughter is a university graduate and employed as a nurse in a Milwaukee hospital and the other is completing her university education with the idea of entering the health occupations area also.

Neil's three children are still at home with their parents in Lansing, Michigan, one in the university and the others at the lower levels in education.

Myrlon's oldest daughter is educating two sons and working in home economics activities. His youngest daughter is married to an industrial worker and supplements their income by working as a retail clerk in a local store.

Nerissa's oldest son has a farm in Missouri and her second oldest just joined him after working in miscellaneous unskilled jobs. Their youngest son holds a management position in a chain of "top notch" night club-restaurant establishments.

Keith's oldest daughter studied creative art beyond the high school level and has displayed her art jewelry in department stores. She is married to a university professor. His oldest son is a university graduate with a position in the computer field. A second son is in his senior year at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Oklahoma preparing for the ministry.

Bob has 4 children. The oldest son served in the military for 2 years, has worked as a draftsman, real estate promoter, trucker and various other unskilled enterprises. His oldest daughter is married to a trucker for the Mayflower Moving Company and travels coast to coast with her husband as his assistant. The younger son is a year out of high school and works locally for a food merchant. Good possibilities for store management. The youngest is still in school.

Nola's oldest daughter graduated from university, taught for awhile, married a photographer and conducts a day care nursery in their home near Palm Springs, California. The younger daughter won a scholarship to one of the best nursing schools in the country but did not like the occupation and now works in an office to supplement her husbands' income as a Los Angeles Policeman. She also has a youngster to care for.

Ethel's oldest daughter completed a 2 year technical program in the health occupations and serves as a medical technician in a hospital. The youngest married a plumber (also owns a small farm) and serves as a housewife and mother as well as gardner.

Carroll's oldest son served in the Marines for one enlistment and had intentions of entering the priesthood. He gave this up, however, and is married and working for a Construction Company as a laborer. The other 5 sons seem not to have gone beyond high school and are occupied at various unskilled occupations.

Rita's six sons have worked for their father, who is a building contractor, or for others in the building trades. One is now a contractor also. The daughter is still in school.

Ronald's daughter studied a business program in high school and has been employed as a bank teller. His son became a store manager and has served in this capacity in two Wisconsin cities for a large merchandiser. The two youngest daughters are still in school.

Dick's oldest daughter married an industrial worker and is occupied as a housewife and mother. His youngest daughter married a farmer and enjoys the rural life as well as being a mother and housewife. Gregory completed a 2 year technical program in air-conditioning at a Nebraska regional technical school. Richard left us at an early age.

Carole's oldest daughter married a farmer and enjoys farm management as well as continuing an office supervisory position. The other two are in school.

Marlyn's four daughters are still in school and his youngest pre-school age.

Melvin's daughter holds a civil service position in the Provost Marshalls' Office at Fort Huachuco, Arizona. She has held that position for several years and is working part time on her college degree, which she hopes to complete before long.

Don's two sons activities are not known but college, no doubt, is in their minds.

The variety of possibilities for this generation is evidenced by this wide scope of activities in which my grandnephews are engaged.

RICHARD DANIEL STROESSENREUTHER

1968--

MY GREAT-GRANDNEPHEW

Richard Daniel is a 14th generation direct descendant of John Pool and has a heritage from the Pooles, which if he is endowed with those traits, could lead him to any heights he wishes.

He is only 13 now, and like myself, his early environment is not the most conducive to reaching heights. In the current era, however, his advantages far outweigh those of the era in which I was born. Farms are no longer isolated as they were in the horse and buggy and early mechanical age. They have television sets to learn about behaviors in all parts of the world, to view world progress first hand and hear prominent persons discuss problems of the present. Many programs discuss avenues to success in existing occupations and future developments. There is school instruction and guidance which offers many fringe benefits not available a half century ago.

Nature study and conservation have strong forces at work and our government fights to preserve natural resources and provide new ones to that this and future generations will enjoy those things which our Poole ancestry enjoyed so much. So if Richard Daniel comes to love that outdoors like his father and grandfather, he may become a great soil scientist like his granduncle Neil, or qualify for any one of thousands of technical occupations developing in the area of conserving natural resources. He might find an agricultural occupation that will keep him close to nature and which our educational system today does so much to promote. Technical schools and universities are offering programs in farm management and soil conservation as well as forestry which make these occupations much more appealing and rewarding than in the past. And all at reasonable economic cost.

He faces the space age with its computer and nuclear aspects which are opening up the doors to new discoveries and exploration. Richard Daniel indeed represents a generation of Pooles with a rich heritage and future hope.

Foreword

This supplement is a compilation of seven generations descending from Moses Poole, son of Daniel Poole and brother to Edwin Poole. It covers the descendents of Allie Mae Poole Brookins, only child of Moses Poole that produced descendants. It includes the entire descendants of Emma Tyla Brookins Grover, my mother, and most of the descendants of Roy Poole Brookins, submitted by his daughter, Mabel. The descendants of Beatrice Brookins Osier are drawn up only through the 11th generation. It covers the period of time from the Poole's migration to Wisconsin, about 1848-1850, to the present, covering a period of approximately 130 years.

My search took me through the Avoca Cemetery at Oakfield, Wisconsin, burial place of Moses Poole and his family, as well as the Brookins's, through records of the Fond du Lac County courthouse, and to the Wisconsin Historical Library in Madison, Wisconsin. Correspondence and family charts totaled many hours.

The story of these seven generations is told through a brief history of the times and sketches of each generation, family charts, and photos, elaborating more on my own family.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In this search for recorded data and facts on the descendants of John Poole I through 14 generations, it is most necessary to acknowledge with deep appreciation and special thanks the contributions of the following generous and interested persons, without whose aid, we could not have achieved this publication:

To Karen Williams, my oldest daughter, whose gift of a book entitled "Family Record" triggered the search for my "roots".

To Allie Grover, my oldest sister, who supplied me with recorded births, marriages, deaths, and photos, and whose remarkable memory added missing details.

To my cousin Mabel Brookins Serrahn Lucas, daughter of Roy Poole Brookins, who eagerly shared her own research and records, and cooperated so generously in accumulating facts and data.

To Bessie Brookins, my oldest living relative, who contributed photos, her childhood story, her remarkable memory, genuine interest and moral support.

To my daughter-in-law, Greta Schnick, who contributed her artistic talent and time in hand printing the family charts.

To Al Petermann, my employer, who allowed me to use the materials and equipment available at the Delavan Enterprise, to accomplish and complete this production.

To Betty Arndt, our Enterprise camera person, who screened and reproduced all the photos in our publication; and to Cindy Lee, who so accurately and beautifully typed and reproduced my copy.

To Ruth S. Worthing and to Jean R. Rentmeister of the Fond du Lac County Historical Society for searching birth, marriage, death, and probate records in the Fond du Lac County Courthouse for me.

And last, but by no means, least, to Harry Hutchison, whose enthusiasm and persistence kept me from "dropping it all" when the "going got tough", and whose patience and tolerance allowed me to supplement my efforts in this publication.

THE POOLES COME TO WISCONSIN

We believe the Pooles migrated from Belchertown, Mass. to Wisconsin about the time Wisconsin became a state -- June, 1848. Whether they all came at the same time, we are not sure, but it is very probable that they did, but we know that Edwin, William, Daniel, Moses, Angelina, and Mary Ann found their way to the Fond du Lac area to be counted in the census of 1850.

The new state of Wisconsin, emerging from a territory to a state, was unsettled and undeveloped. Lying between the country's two great natural systems of transportation, the Great Lakes and Mississippi River, she possessed a unique geographical destiny. The most heavily populated areas at that time were on the rivers and lakes and along the Southern border. There were settlements at Milwaukee, Racine, Sheboygan, Manitowoc and Green Bay on the Lake Michigan side; on the southern border were Janesville, Jefferson and Platteville; on the Mississippi were Mineral Point, Cassville, Prairie Du Chein and LaCrosse; inland along river ways, Black River Falls and Chippewa Falls, and along the Wisconsin River, settlements at Fort Winnebago, Oshkosh, Neenah, Grand Chute, and Fort Howard; inland were growing settlements of Madison, Watertown, and Fond du Lac on Lake Winnebago.

Traveling inland one would find fairly well settled farming country in the southern prairie areas, the farmhouses nearly all frame buildings, painted white, about a half mile apart. The original log dwellings were converted into stables and toolsheds. Here and there clusters of houses formed a village, usually around a mill dam. Farther north of Racine and Milwaukee would be found heavily wooded areas with farming in the pioneer stages. Taking the route from Milwaukee to Watertown was indeed a rough trip -- the new born roads a succession of hills, holes and waterpools. Several miles beyond Watertown, the forest thinned out and here the traveler proceeded on horseback through "oak openings" -- still uncut and unplowed, and then finally giving way to virgin prairies where again we find developing farm land, extending as far as Lake Winnebago and along the Fox River.

Traveling north from Madison, up the Wisconsin River, at Fort Winnebago, again we would find log cabin pioneer settlements. If a traveler would portage from the Wisconsin River to the Fox River, he would find only Indian trails until he reached Lake Winnebago. Along the Fox, between Lake Winnebago and Grant Butte des Mort Lake, the sawmill village of Oshkosh comes into view, and at the south end of Lake Winnebago, the mill town of Fond du Lac. To this area came the Pooles from Belchertown, Mass.

We do not know by what means of transportation they used for their journey -- possibly several means. At this time, there were no railroads in Wisconsin, and the state could not depend on waterways alone for transportation. There was a need for improving and promoting the waterways and ports, as well as improved means of land travel. They were anxious to draw people to the state to promote and support these necessary improvements, as well as to develop the land and natural resources.

In order to encourage emigration, thousands of copies of immigrant guide books and pamphlets were issued and circulated, as well as letters from friends and relatives who were all ready here. The basic attraction was the land itself. The advertisers pointed out that the states vast acreage that was still in the public domain, was waiting for squatters to occupy.

By an Act of Congress in 1820, provisions were made for the sale of public lands in the territories owned by the United States. As fresh lands were surveyed, new federal land offices were set up in newly created districts, while older offices were abandoned as the land passed to private ownership. The minimum price of land was $1.25 an acre; the smallest parcel 80 acres, and terms, cash; so a buyer had to have at least $100 to purchase his land. He had to go in person or send an agent to the land office. He would be given small township plats showing the vacant or unentered lands.

Veterans of the War of 1812 or the Mexican War received bounties in the form of warrants entitling them each to 1/4 section (160 acres) of the public domain. In 1850 the warrants were made assignable, so that veterans or their heirs could sell them if preferring ready money to a future farm.

Americans and Europeans were swarming westward during the early years of Wisconsin's statehood. In the decade after 1850, one American in every four moved from one state to another, and the ratio even more in some of the older states. In the same decade, more than 2½ million Europeans migrated to America. This first great immigration wave of the 19th century crested during the years 1847-1854.

The reason for the westward move varied: (1) Small farmers found, with the improvement of railroads and canals, they could not compete against imports from more productive areas in the midwest. (2) Economic and social changes created discontent among Europeans. (3) The potato famine of northern Europe brought hordes of Irish and Norweigians to America. (4) Religious upheavals in Norway and German. (5) Conscription in many European countries.

The settlers who headed for Wisconsin came as individuals, families, and larger groups of families and individuals, planning to arrive in the spring in time to locate, put in a crop, and prepare for winter. They came by a variety of routes and modes of travel -- some by river boat, canal boat, stage coach, or railroad, or by a combination of them all. From the northeastern states, many came by team and wagon, shipping a part of the distance by train or boat.

Many were unable to buy lands at all during their first season in Wisconsin, or if they bought, could not afford the expense of converting it into a farm, thus they hired out as farm laborers, lumberjacks, construction on railroads and canals, or as skilled laborers in villages and cities.

In the year 1847, the population of Wisconsin was 210,546; in 1850, 305,390. In 1870 the state reached the one million mark. In 1847, Fond du Lac had a half dozen private schools with only 2 public schools. Attendance was not compulsary and some ran for only 3 months. By the year 1860, Fond du Lac had a population of 5,450 people.

MY GREAT-GRANDFATHER
MOSES POOLE

The following "Patent to Pool" tells us the Alvin Poole apparently applied for and received a grant of land available for the public -- there is no date to signify when it was applied for -- only that he received it in 1848. Unfortunately, Alvin died in 1846 in Iowa - thus the land became a part of his estate. Since he was not married, his father, Daniel Poole, became beneficiary of this estate. The Warranty deed shows that this particular piece of land was sold by Daniel to his son Moses, for $100. By the terms given in Daniel's will, Moses had received all that Daniel had intended him to get and had nothing more to give him, so we assume the land in Wisconsin was in part a gift from his father.

Moses, the youngest son of Daniel and his wife, Polly, was born August 20, 1825, at Belchertown, Mass. The Wisconsin 1850 census finds him in Wisconsin, Town of Byron, age 25, with his oldest brother William, 45, and Angelina, 27. Sometime in between 1850 and 1859, he married Rosetta Sarah Hudson, whom we believe to be the daughter of Augustus Hudson and his wife, Phoebe Partridge, also living in this area. To this union was born Allie Mae, 1859; William, 1861; and Elmer, 1863. Little Elmer lived only 3 years, dying of Whooping Cough Dec. 14, 1866, and is buried in Avoca cemetery in Oakfield, Wisconsin.

Rosetta was a frail woman, suffering from consumption (tubercolosis) which was quite common at that time. She kept a diary in her last years, after the death of Elmer, which she apparently never ceased mourning, and possibly, indirectly hastened her own death at such an early age. According to her diary, Moses was quite a successful farmer. She mentions his going east to buy machinery, and she had the first sewing machine in the area. We gather from her entries that she was a deeply religious woman, constantly praising the Lord for his blessings, and asking for strength to pursue the many tasks required of the pioneer housewife. She speaks of making garments for Allie, William and Moses; she complains constantly of feeling ill and tired and many days barely able to drag through the day. In spite of her affliction, she was always willing to lend a helping hand to a more unfortunate neighbor or friend. She died in the early part of 1870, leaving two motherless children, and Moses a widower.

Land records in Fond du Lac courthouse record that Moses bought and sold many pieces of property in the county. The land he willed to Allie Mae was located in Portage County, which would suggest he was an enterprising business man, by the standards of that era.

The only insight we have as to the character of Moses Poole is best expressed in this letter to Stella Blose from Bessie Brookins, dated Feb. 27, 1959, and from which I quote, "Grandpa (Poole), as I heard, was a violent man. My mother was only ten when her mother died, and when he came home, expecting dinner to be on the table, my mother was sitting on the lumber pile, reading. He was sure she was going to the dogs, so he married, and his second wife used to work for them before Grandma died. They never were happy and mother, she married my dad when only 16, because she'd rather be poor, and wanted to make a happy home of her own."

Moses married Harriet S. Hale, daughter of Joseph Hale and Maria Downer of Plover, Wisconsin, June 6, 1871. She was born Dec. 25, 1839, and had been employed by the Pooles as a domestic, prior to Rosetta's death. Moses and Harriet had two children -- Lulu and Grant. Can find no birth records, but we know it would be between 1872 and 1879.

Moses died July 6, 1880, leaving Harriet to raise two small children alone. She never remarried. The following page records his will, which was witnessed shortly before his death. Allie Mae was at that time married and mother of two sons; William was 19 or 20 years old. Harriet remained on the farm and conducted the business until her own death in 1912. We do not know what then happened to the "Poole Place".

The children of Moses and Harriet left no heirs. Grant, an unstable person, never married, and Lulu, altho married 3 times, had no children and seemed to have led a life of taking care of other people. Both she and Grant died in Michigan.

MOSES POOLE AND ROSETTA HUDSON

Allie Mae Poole

Allie Mae, first born child of Moses and Rosetta, was born October 12, 1858 in Town of Byron, Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin. On October 20, 1874, at age 16, she married Billie Bliss Brookins, son of Bennett Brookins and his wife, Emma Annette Smith, at Oakfield, Wisconsin. They had six children - Gay Bliss, Roy Poole, Emma Tyla, Beatrice, Ruth Iris, and Bessie Mae.

She lived on the farm in Portage County, which she later inherited from her father by his will, as her first child, Gay, was born there. Perhaps she sold the property after Moses death, as they did return to the Oakfield area and seemed to have been pretty well established in the community there at the time of her own death. She died December 2, 1897, at age 39 - probably of a cerebral hemorrhage, as she was extremely obese.

Mabel Brookins Serrahn Lucas, daughter of Roy Brookins, says of Allie Mae, "She was very plump. When her last baby was on the way, Uncle Gay had to push the treadle on the sewing machine while she made baby clothes. She died while playing 'ring-around-the rosy' with the kids."

William Poole

William Poole, son of Moses and Rosetta, was born in 1861 in the Town of Byron. He was nine years old at the time of his mother's death, and age 19 when his father died in 1880. Not much is known of his life and activities. He married Esther Downer - they had no children. He was residing in Portage County, Town of Carson, when he died, from smoke inhalation November 1, 1896, one year before his sister's death, and believed to be buried in a country plot in Town of Carson. His wife Esther died November 1, 1901. It is possible he resided on the farm which his sister, Allie Mae, inherited from Moses · he may have purchased it from her with his own inherited money.

ALLIE MAE POOLE AND BILLIE BROOKINS

The turn from the nineteenth century was still a time of pioneering in Wisconsin. The state was only 52 years old; there were still many areas to settle. Times were not easy; farming was a struggle and required a lot of heavy, hard, and unrewarding toil. People were still moving about, seeking good land, developing the natural resources. Cities and industries were growing; the waterways were being utilized for power, and along the rivers, paper mills were becoming prevalent. The power companies were moving in and great potential was present for the state, both in farming and industry, but a lot of hard work and ambition was necessary.

Allie Mae's untimely death, at age 39, left Billie, her husband, with several very young children; Gay was 20, Roy 17, Emma 15, Beatrice (Trixie) 11, Ruth 5, and Baby Bessie but 2 years old. On May 2, 1878, Billie married a widow, Mary Ward Crumb, who had four children, the combined families totaling ten children. Her children were: Mel, Letty, William, and Phoebe Crumb, probably ranging in ages 5 to early 20's.

Gay, the oldest Brookins child, married the step sister, Letty. Their early life was a struggle at farming, and at one period they moved to Virginia for a short time, eventually moving into the city of Fond du Lac, where he was employed by Verifine Ice Cream Co. until his retirement. They had no children of their own, so in the early 30's, they adopted 2 of Letty's nieces, Normay and Carol, and raised them. To Gay and Letty fell the burden of caring for the elderly parents, Billie and wife Mary, who lived to be very old. Nevertheless, Gay and Letty celebrated their 50th Wedding Anniversary, thus enjoying a long life together. After Letty's death in 1953, Gay spent his remaining years with their youngest daughter, Normay, who was married with several children of her own. Gay died in 1963 - a quiet, fine, gentle man, much beloved by everyone.

Roy, after living a short time in New London with his wife, Josephine, moved to Ontanogan, Michigan, where he remained the rest of his life. There were five children, three are still living.

Upon graduating from 8th grade, Beatrice taught school a short time before her marriage to Cecil Osier. They, too, had their bout with farming for awhile in Oakfield, moving later to Fond du Lac, where they lived most of their lives, except during WW II, when they moved to Sheboygan where Cecil worked in the ship yards, and later returned to Fond du Lac. "Trixie" was a beautiful woman, both physically and spiritually. She loved children; she raised four of her own and took care of many grandchildren and great grandchildren. After Cecil's demise, she lived with her granddaughter, Peggy, and cared for her children. She died in 1978, age 92, in a nursing home.

Ruth married the step brother, William Crumb. They farmed near Fond du Lac. Bearing four children only one was to live a normal life to adulthood. Morris, the son, now lives with his wife in Florida -- there were no children. Ruth also died in 1978, age 86.

Bessie is still with us, the last of that generation of Brookins children. She never married and spent her life doing domestic work for other people until her retirement. She now lives alone in Sheboygan. This lady, with her handicaps, cares about other people; she keeps her mind active and her hands busy. She lost one eye when a very small child, and has crippling arthritis. She has been a great help in compiling bits of information to help in this history.

MY MOTHER
EMMA TYLA BROOKINS

Emma Tyla Brookins, oldest daughter of Billie Brookins and Allie Mae Poole, and my mother, married Elmer Joseph Grover in October, 1901, when she was 19 years old. Elmer was the son of William Henry Grover (migrant from New York State) and Candace Maria Hale (also migrant from New York State) and was born at Plover, Wisconsin. His mother, Candace, was a sister to Moses Poole's second wife, Harriet Hale, so it is conceivable to assume that Elmer met Emma through visits to Oakfield to see his Aunt "Hat", as he always called her, and to assist her.

Elmer was a "homesteader" in Portage County, near the village of Junction City, and it was to their first homestead, situated south of Mill Creek, that he brought his bride, their home being a one room log cabin. A diary, which he started January 1, 1901 (the Jan. before his marriage) and kept till Jan., 1906 gives us a generous insight into the hardships of those pioneer days of struggling for existence. An entry records "the rats ate Em's jelly last night", and hearsay has it that snakes occasionally crawled up thru the floor, and that is was not unusual to look up and see an Indian peering into the window, altho by that time they were peaceful Indians, but they wandered a lot, and did not have very good manners.

Since this was to be a temporary dwelling for Elmer and Emma, shortly after their marriage, Elmer started clearing the land, building a barn, and starting their first frame house. It went very slowly, as he was constantly helping his brothers, working for wages here and there, trying to make a living and using what he could spare for materials for his home.

Their first child, Allie Marie (named for her grandmother), was born in August, 1902, at Oakfield. It was a difficult delivery for my mother and necessitated her return to Oakfield later to be hospitalized at Oshkosh for surgery and not returning to their home until late in October. Apparently the log cabin was unsuitable for the new baby, and much of the following winter was spent with relatives.

In November, 1903, Elmer moved Emma and Allie into the new unfinished home. Entries in the diary record a cruel, cold, and miserable winter, with my mother and Allie sick much of the time. It was necessary to stay up nights to keep the fires going to prevent freezing, often taking shifts with relatives. In December, Emma suffered a miscarriage. Elmer's final notation for 1903 was that it had been quite a disastrous year.

In August, 1905 the second child, Candace was born, and the struggles and hardship continued. Each day was a day of hard labor with little recreation. People visited one another often and they made many train trips to Stevens Point and to Oakfield to visit the relatives. My mother's younger sisters often came for the summer months, and Aunt Bessie spent a whole year with them. People helped one another, which was a necessity with the hard labor required of them.

In the summer of 1907, Elmer circulated a petition for Rural Route No. 2 -- a route of 27¼ miles. After passing the civil service examination and being appointed by President Theodore Roosevelt, service started on March 2, 1908. His vehicle was a horse and buggy and he serviced 135 families. During the summer, he used my mother's bicycle, which he had to abandon in 1911, when parcel post was introduced. He also walked the route several times. (I recall riding to school with my father in the sleigh he used in the winter -- it was enclosed, and he used a "foot warmer" filled with hot coals to keep his feet warm for the long route; many winter days were seven and eight hour days in the snow and cold, but the mail was always delivered). He purchased his first car, a Chevrolet, in 1917.

After his appointment as rural carrier, Elmer sold his farm to his brother, Hugh, and moved his family into the village of Junction City. After living there several years, with the family increasing, Elmer decided they needed more room for "growing". He missed working with the land, so he purchased a 40 acre wooded plot about 1½ miles south of the village, clearing the land in his spare time, building a barn and a temporary dwelling for his family; then proceeded to build what was to be his permanent home. By the time the permanent dwelling was "partially" finished, there were six children. Betty (this author) was the first child born in the "new home", followed five years later by the 8th child (and last), Ralph.

My mother had a very hard life; she was not a strong woman and bearing eight children, each a difficult birth, took its toll. She died in January, 1928, age 45, leaving a houseful of young children ranging from 1½ years to 15 years of age. Allie was 24 and worked in Stevens Point as domestic help; Candace was married and living in Delavan; Inez, age 19, was working also, in Stevens Point. To Allie fell the task of caring for the five younger children and her father until his death in 1957.

In 1935, the family home was completed -- the upstairs rooms finished and the outside shingled. Emma never lived to see her home finished, or any of her grandchildren. It is quite ironic that her mother and her grandmother also died before their families were raised. Pioneer life was very difficult for these women.

Elmer retired from the mail route in 1947, age 70, after 40 years of active duty. He was 79 years old when he died.

SUMMARY OF THE ELEVENTH GENERATION

This eleventh generation of "Grovers" started their young lives in the years of the "great depression", the younger members during World War II. Having always lived frugally, it probably was not as difficult for them, as it would be for the present generations of the affluent society, should they be faced with such times. The "depression", coming about in 1929, covered an era of about ten years, gradually moving out in the late 30's, spurred on by threat of war.

Hitler was ravaging Europe, and our country was making preparation for the possibility of being drawn into what was to become World War II. Factories were converted to making war products; ship yards flourished as the country made preparations for the greatest fleet ever produced in our civilization; automobile industries were converted to making defense machinery; new industries put out planes to enlarge our air force; textile factories converted to making uniforms, parachutes, etc. -- there was hardly an industry that did not have "government orders". Farmers doubled their efforts to feed our growing army as well as the people of the nation.

This "stepped up" industrial revolution took care of the unemployment problem -- there was work for everyone, including women. Young men and women were drawn into the armed forces -- the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, as well as Coast Guard and Merchant Marines. Their jobs were filled by women and older men.

On December 7, 1941, the threat became a reality, as Japan attacked Pearl Harbor. War was declared on Japan, and within a few days, on Germany, drawing us into, what seemed then, an impossible and terrifying conflict on two fronts. There was hardly a family that did not have a star in the window, indicating a son, brother, husband, father, daughter, or sister in the service. The country rallied to support our defense, and a spirit of patriotism never before experienced, drove the country to an unbelievable victory in 1945, after four long, horrible years of war.

The list of eleventh generation "Pooles" serving was long, but fortunately, few lost their lives. An incomplete list of this author's lineage include: Orville Grover, Air Force mechanic, stationed in India; Ralph Grover, U.S. Navy, stationed in North Africa; Mary Brookins, WACS; Richard Osier, Air Force; Morris Crumb, Army.

The return of the military to civilian life in the latter years of the 40's caused some hardship and unemployment. Young people whose lives had been disrupted with the years of military service were trying to re-establish their lives -- many had families by now. Housing was scarce, as home building had almost halted during the war years; munition and military factories and plants were being reconverted to peace time products. The demand for housing and automobiles caused construction and manufacturing to soar upward; new industries were created from discovery of plastics and other synthetics we were forced to use during the war years. Thus, from the dark years of depression and war, prosperity immersed by the 50's.

EMMA BROOKINS AND ELMER GROVER

Through the depression years, war years, and immerging into the 50's, the eleventh generation had established their lives. The children of Emma and Elmer Grover were scattered throughout Wisconsin.

After her mother's death in 1928, Allie returned home and took up the burdens of her mother, caring for the children still in school and baby Ralph. After her father's death in 1954, the farm was sold, and Allie bought a small house in Stevens Point. She worked for her brother, Vernon, in his dry cleaning establishment for seven years, then sold her home, moved up to Dallas, Wisconsin near Ralph, bought a mobile home which was situated on her brother's lot, and worked in the nursing home up there for several years. In 1971 she came to Walworth County and at present she is at Lakeland Nursing Home at Elkhorn.

Candace, after teaching two years in the primary grades of Junction City public school, married Chester Barnes and moved to Delavan, Wisconsin. They had four children, their first children being twin boys. Chet was a carpenter and worked with his father until the depression when there was no work. After the grim depression years, Chet went into police work and was established with the Sheriff's Department of Walworth County, serving as county officer, deputy, and four years as sheriff. When his four year term was up, he left the department, returning to their home in Delavan and worked at Borg Instruments in Delavan until his death in 1955. After their return from Elkhorn to Delavan, Candace returned to teaching, serving as kindergarden teacher at St. Andrew's Catholic school until the class was eliminated. She then established a nursery school in her home until an opening in the public school gave her a chance to return to teaching kindergarten, where she remained until her retirement in 1970. She still lives in her own home in Delavan, has an active social life, serving wherever she can, and enjoys her family, which includes beside her own children, 6 grandchildren, 4 step grandchildren, and two great grandchildren.

Inez married Louis Tufte in 1930. In spite of the hard times they built their own little home in Stevens Point where they lived all their lives, and raised three children. After the lean depression years, Louis worked for the Soo Line Railroad in Stevens Point where he worked until his retirement. To supplement the income to raise three children, Inez worked as a grocery check-out clerk in a neighborhood grocery until crippling arthritis forced her to retire. Louis was a sportsman and gardener, and was noted for his lucious strawberries and tomatoes, so he found no problems with retirement. Inez was an excellent seamstress and cook, and took great pride in keeping their little home spic and span. Louis died in 1974; Inez in May, 1975.

After one year of college at Stevens Point, Vernon served as assistant to a lawyer in Junction City for a few years during the depression. Taking a course in refrigeration, he became associated with Mier's Ice Cream Co. in Beaver Dam, where he and his wife, Katherine, resided until the late 40's. They returned to Stevens Point where they went into the dry cleaning business, buying Welsbys Dry Cleaning, a well established business. They raised five children. Katherine died in 1963, their youngest child being only 10 years old. In 1972, he married Dorothy Kardach. He sold his dry cleaning business and is now employed as maintenance man at a potato factory in the Plover area. They still live in Stevens Point. Dorothy is employed at the Portage County Courthouse.

Orville served in World War II as a mechanic in the Air Force, stationed in India. He married late in life, a widow with four children. He and Mildred had one child of their own, John Robert. He died in 1968 at Janesville, and we have lost contact with his family.

Ruth, upon her graduation from high school in 1936, attended a school of Cosmetology in Milwaukee, and in February, 1937 married William Bartelmas of Waukesha. Bill was employed by the Waukesha Motor Works most of his life, retiring in 1979. Ruth works for a laundry establishment. They raised 3 children and have 6 grandchildren. Their entire married life has been in Waukesha.

The youngest Grover child, Ralph, upon high school graduation, joined the Navy when war was at its peak. He was fortunate in being based on land during the remaining conflict - first in England and then in North Africa. On his release from the service, he worked for the Nekoosa-Edwards paper mill and while employed there met and married Arlene Krohn. They moved to Platteville where he attended college, majoring in agriculture. He was hired by the state to work in their laboratories, first at Madison, then at Barron, and now Eau Claire. They live in Dallas, Wisconsin, raised three children and have two grandchildren.

BETTY GROVER SCHNICK
Compiler and Author

Seventh child of eight children and youngest daughter of five daughters, I battled my way through childhood and adolescense. Left motherless at age six and with two olders brothers to torment and tease me, it was a matter of "survival of the fittest", or "swim or sink", and I chose to swim. Inheriting my father's love of adventure, I was always ready to experiment with any new venture, and found through the years I could do most anything I thought I could or wanted to do, and it still works for me today.

My childhood on our small farm offered creative opportunity, and with a vivid imagination, our woodlot became Sherwood Forest; a setting for an Indian settlement; a "fairyland" with castles. We built tepees in summer, igloos in winter, or rode our imaginery horses through the woods. Having no playmates my age, I created them. The Mill Creek nearby was "skater's paradise" in the winter; a place to swim in the summer. There being no television to distract me, I became a self-taught amateur musician on the piano, and read every book that came into the house.

Our "Christmases" were unforgettable. Having lived frugally all his life, it was one time of the year my father opened his heart and pocketbook to make our Christmas a day to remember. We were not deprived of toys -- a doll, sled, pair of skis or skates, books, games -- a time of excitement and wonderment, and one day of the year when we were all nice to one another.

There were times when I felt like a "number" among the many family members, but the opportunity present to share and compromise was an asset, which I didn't realize till later years.

My education took me through high school and two years of college, graduating with a 2-year certificate, which at that time qualified me to teach in a rural school (now extinct). My first school (and last) was a one-room, all eight elementary grades, 1-8, in Wood County, known as Hillview School. There were 33 pupils; the school year was 1941-42. I stayed with a local family, paid $5 a week room and board, walked a half mile to school each day, built the fire there to have it warm when the children arrived -- and I would do it again only if my life depended on it.

December 7, 1941, the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. Completing the school year, I moved to Delavan, Wisconsin where I stayed with my sister, Candace, and her family and went to work for Borg Instruments, which had converted from clock works to ammunition. On September 19, 1942, I married Ray Schnick at Dearborn, Michigan, where he was attending mechanical school in the Air Force. After a brief honeymoon, I returned to my work at Delavan until it was possible for me to join my husband. Our travels in the states took us to Oklahoma City, Belleville, Ill., when he was at Scott Field, and Columbia, S.C. It was while we were in Columbia that Ray was ordered overseas in the autumn of 1944, and I returned home to Junction City to await the arrival of our first child, Karen, born April 30, 1945.

Ray was stationed in Sicily with the 57th Bomb Wing as radio-gunner on a B-25 bomber, and participated in bomb raids over Northern Italy and the Brenner Pass until the war in Europe ended in June, 1945. He returned to the states in August, seeing his 4-month old daughter for the first time, and while home on leave, VJ (victory in Japan) was declared. The long war was over. He was mustered out in November, 1945; rank, technical sergeant.

The struggle to find their way back into civilian life was not easy for the returning servicemen and their families. Many had enlisted or been drafted upon high school graduation; others had their college educations interrupted; some returned to jobs that were held for them through the war. Housing was scarce, as building had practically ceased during the war years. Men who were single when the war began, now found themselves with a family, no job, and no place to take their family. Wives, waiting for the return of their soldiers, sailors, or marines found, after the happy reunion, that they, perhaps, were not going to "live happily ever after".

Ray returned to his job at the paper mill in Wisconsin Rapids. Our first home was a furnished 3-room cottage on Lake Wachita nearby the city. Not being happy as a factory worker, he apprenticed as an electrician at Staub's Electric in Wisconsin Rapids, and completed his apprenticeship at one of the area paper mills. We moved 3 times while in this area, each time to a more satisfactory dwelling. July 15, 1949, our 2nd child, Darlene, arrived -- about the time her father completed his apprenticeship.

Eager to put his skills into practice and profit, Ray sought employment with the contractor in process of building the Petenwell and Castle Rock dam projects, and in September, 1949, the family moved to a cottage in Adams County. There we experienced 3 more moves, the final one being into Adams-Friendship, where we lived until 1954, and where our last child, Randy, arrived November 12, 1950.

The dam projects were completed in 1950, and we were "unemployed". The next four years, Ray worked away from home, sometimes commuting, sometimes being home only on weekends. He worked at the Cassville power plant, for Wausau Mining, at Fairbanks and Morris in Beloit, at Rockford, Ill., and at Baraboo. In 1954, he was hired by a construction contractor for the Admiral Corporation in Harvard, Ill. It was then the family decided that Southern Wisconsin would be the area to establish a permanent home, where industry was prevalent.

In the fall of 1954, we moved to Walworth County, renting a home in the Delavan Highlands Subdivision on Delavan Lake. Karen was 9 years old and in 4th grade; Darlene, 5, had just started kindergarden; Randy was 4. After renting a year, we bought the home we were renting and are still living here today.

Ray's job at Admiral became his lifetime employment; a few years after working with the contractor, he became employed by the Admiral Corp. as their chief electrician, where he stayed till the plant was forced to close permanently in August, 1979, due to foreign import. He was three years short of retirement.

Ill health stalked Ray the last ten years of his life at Admiral. After three heart attacks, he underwent by-pass surgery in February, 1978, but returned to work until the plant closed. He has since been partially retired, partially self-employed.

After raising our family, and they were well along in their teens, I returned to the work world. For 13 years I served in the paste-up department of Walworth County Shopper/Advertiser as paste-up artist. Finding conditions not to my liking, I left and sought employment at the Delavan Enterprise in March, 1977 and remain there at present writing.

Daughter Karen lives with her husband, Allen Williams, and two children, Andrew and Danielle, in Janesville, where Allen is employed at Parker Pen.

Darlene is a key punch operator, employed by Allied Music Corp. in Elkhorn.

Randall (Randy) is an electrician, also, and does electrical construction. He lives with his wife, Greta, and daughter Emilie Kay, in Delavan.
